EX-CHAMPION STRICKEN IN NEW YORK; SECRECY VEILS HIS CONDITION

New York, Sept. 30 (I.N.S.).—Although the greatest secrecy prevailed, it became known today that two physicians were in attendance on Jack Dempsey at his suite at the Hotel Belmont.

New York, Sept. 30 (I.N.S.).—Although the greatest secrecy prevailed, it became known today that two physicians were in attendance on Jack Dempsey at his suite at the Hotel Belmont.

No member of the ex-champion's staff would admit that he was ill neither would any one deny it. However, it is known that one physician was called in early this morning to attend Dempsey and that later another was summoned for a consultation.

An attache of his camp expressed complete mystification today concerning the nature of the ex-champion's trouble.

"He's got all of us guessing," the man said. "He hasn't been right since the fight and no one apparently knows what it is all about. Jack can't keep any food on his stomach."

LABOR PLANS FIGHT FOR FORD 5-DAY WORK WEEK

By KENNETH CLARK.
I. N. S. News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, Sept. 30.—Encouraged by action of Henry Ford in adopting the five-day week, the American Federation of Labor will fight vigorously for a shorter working week in industry, William Green, president, declared today.

Green does not believe there will be universal acceptance immediately of the five-day week, but he thinks that in a few years employers will realize that, with the increased production through time-saving machines, wages will be increased and working hours reduced.

The Federation, not Ford, should be given credit for first bringing about the shorter week, Green said.

"Ford seems merely to have accepted the philosophy of the Federation in regard to hours, wages and production," Green declared.

GIRL PINS GAY DRINKING BOUT ON MRS. STANDISH

Providence, Sept. 30.—An eighteen-year-old high school girl testified today she participated in drinking parties staged by beautiful Mrs. Mildred Standish with college boys in the absence of her husband, Granville S. Standish, Jr., a descendant of Myles Standish, and that the young wife kept dates with collegians on frequent occasions and greeted at least one of the boys with an ardent kiss.

The girl, formerly a chum of Mrs. Standish, is Miss Ellis A. Williamson, of Hope High School, testifying as a witness for Standish in Superior Court in his suit for divorce on charges that his wife was guilty of gross misbehavior.

SLEEP THREE IN BED.

Preceding the girl on the stand, Standish, himself a prominent member of society here, told of sleeping three in a bed with his wife and Miss Williamson, Mrs. Standish being in the middle.

U. S. WILL BACK OUT OF THE WORLD COURT

Washington, Sept. 30. (Universal)—The Administration decided definitely to withdraw application for membership in the World Court, it was learned in high official quarters today.

Just what form the withdrawal will take and whether at some later date this country may again seek admission, are yet to be determined, it was stated.

It was emphasized, however, that the Administration considers the World Court "dead" so far as this country is concerned and there is said to be a general feeling of relief that the Court itself made it possible for the United States to get out so easily.

GOVERNOR SMITH of New York is nominated again—the fifth time. The crowd yells: "Al, our next President." Governor Smith replies, "One nomination at a time, please." Everything is done by acclamation.

The loud acclaim of the Democratic nomination contrasts unpleasantly with the superfunctious silliness that follows in the platform.

NEW YORK DEMOCRATS think it would be wise to go into the World Court, with fits and bits, and hope "our participation will promote the elimination of future wars."

That is Democratic silliness. Our participation would promote

SLAIN BY HER SUITOR IN DOUBLE TRAGEDY

Mrs. Irene Leger of Leominster, slain by school teacher, Don C. Clark, who then killed himself, when the woman's husband returned unexpectedly and found the pair together in his home.

FIND FATEFUL VERSES WRITTEN BY KILLER IN LEOMINSTER ROMANCE

Leominster, Sept. 30.—" 'Tis Fate but collecting her dues."

In a poem to Mrs. Irene Leger, penned only a few hours before he killed her and then himself, Don C. Clark wrote this line.

"Dream Ships" he called his love poem to the mother he took with him in death when surprised by her husband in the Main street bungalow upon which tragedy had been creeping for six weeks.

"Somewhere out there it is sailing
And o mhru life's storms it will rest,
Its timbers may groan and its course be unknown;
God's hand turns the spokes of the wheel."

A prophetic poem, "Dream Ships," for through six bitter weeks, it was learned today, six weeks while the wheel of tragedy turned—also but inexorable—attempts were made in vain to break up the friendship of Clark and Mrs. Leger, a mother.

EX-HUBBY SAYS AIMEE WANTED TO KILL HIM

Providence, R. I., Sept. 30.—Aimee Semple McPherson, woman evangelist, accused of criminal conspiracy in Los Angeles, and who it has been revealed was divorced in this city in 1921, and threatened to take her husband's life, records of the divorce trial, in Superior Court showed today.

Both Harold B. McPherson and his mother, Mrs. Annie M. McPherson, testified that the evangelist threatened to kill McPherson. The testimony, in the form of affidavits, paints the famous religionist, as "cruel, high tempered, and a raging virago, who would throw fits at will like a matron."

McPherson, following the trial in 1921, obtained a divorce on the grounds of extreme cruelty. Custody

O'BRIEN HINTS BALLOT BOXES TAMPERED WITH

Charges that ballot boxes had been tampered with, clashes between counsel and apparent attempts to delay proceedings marked the opening today of the recount hearing on petitions of District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien and Charles G. Keene before Auditor John J. Ronan at the courthouse today.

Auditor Ronan, who was appointed by Justice Pierce of the Supreme Court to take evidence in the contest for the Republican nomination for district attorney, finally overruled all opposition, ordered ballots brought before him and opened the hearing.

A large crowd was on hand in room 404 when Auditor Ronan took his seat. District Attorney O'Brien was present, accompanied by his assistant, George Alpert, who represented him. Assistant Corporation Counsel and apparent attempts to delay Samuel Silverman appeared for the election commissioners and Attorney bs and was afraid to sleep alone, so we all slept together," said Standish.

With the recital of details of one drinking party after another by Miss Williamson, followed by cross-examination, in which she denied wanting to remove Mrs. Standish in the affections of Standish, the trial ended and decision was reserved by Judge Blodgett.

"On the night of June 2 I went over to the Standish home after Mr. Standish had gone to Newport," said Miss Williamson, beginning her recital. "After I got there, Mrs. Standish called Mr. X and explained to me that he was a friend she met in Charlottesville, Va., a college student of the University of Virginia.

"Mr. X came over with another fellow. Some liquor was procured and after a while we had seven at the party. Finally all but myself and two of the fellows went home and this left four of us there, counting Mrs. Standish, the hostess."

"How late did you stay?" the witness was asked.

"Until midnight."

"Did anything happen after the four of you were alone?"

"Yes, Mrs. Standish and Mr. X had been drinking in the bathroom, where the drinks were mixed. Mrs. Standish came out and told me that she had spilled liquor on her dress and had to go into the bedroom to change it. Mr. X went into the room with her."

"Then what happened next?"

"Mr. Standish came home and found them together."

"Were there any more 'parties'?"

"Yes; on one occasion I was with Mrs. Standish and two fellows and Mrs. Standish got very drunk. I took her home and put her to bed and stayed there with her. About three o'clock in the morning she got up and tried to climb out of the window. She didn't know what she was doing.

"One day I went with Mrs. Standish to keep a date at Kingston College. We looked around for the boys and were driving away from the college grounds when we came on to them.

Mrs. Standish jumped out of the car, ran up to one of them and threw her arms around him, kissing him.

"I was out with Mrs. Standish and two fellows in an automobile at another time when she got so that she had to be driven around all night to sober up. Finally I took her to the Union Depot and rubbed her fore-head and hands to get her into shape."

When she finished her story, Miss Williamson was taken for rigid cross-examination by ex-State Senator John J. McGrane of Providence, attorney for Mrs. Standish.

Standish, preceding the girl as a witness, vigorously denied having made a promise to Miss Williamson that he would marry her, after the divorce, if she helped him get it.

He also denied having tried to "frame" his wife at the time he alleges he found her with Mr. X. He testified that on two occasions, Mrs. Standish fell downstairs, one of these occasions being at his father's wedding.

Under cross-examination, Miss Williamson was asked by Attorney McGrane: "Are you not willing to take Mrs. Standish's place in the affections of Granville Standish?"

DEFINES "SWEETHEART."

A—No, sir, I haven't any such intention.

Q—Do you care for him?"

A—No, not in that way. He's a very good friend. I have another "friend" now.

Q—You mean you have a sweetheart?

A—No, a "friend."

Q—What's the difference between a friend and a sweetheart?

A—A friend is one that's true to you; a sweetheart is one that you love.

There was a gasp of merriment from the courtroom, interrupting the questioning.

"Did Mr. Standish ever drink?" went on McGrane.

A—Yes, I have seen him drinking, but he was always removed at the parties. The parties were gay ones, too.

TRIAL IS ENDED.

Two witnesses, Miss Anna P. Lattin and Miss Agnes R. James, both of East Providence, testified the Standish family tried in every way to humiliate the son's wife. Myles Standish, brother of the husband, said the family tried to make the best of the marriage and tried to be nice to Mrs. Standish.

The wife's attorney asked Judge Blodgett for dismissal of the divorce petition on three grounds, as follows: That the petitioner failed to establish a legal residence of two years in Rhode Island; the petitioner did not come into court "with clean hands;" admitting the testimony of all parties, it had not been proved, either in law or fact, that there was gross misbehavior.

HINTS AT TAMPERING.

Attorney Alpert informed the auditor he noticed the ballot boxes were not present, although he had served summonses on the Election Commissioners yesterday.

Attorney Silverman charged Alpert had intimated to the Election Commissioners there had been tampering with the ballot boxes. This created a sensation, which was increased when Silverman declared if the ballot boxes were to be removed from City Hall "unlike a representative of District Attorney O'Brien I will not stand for it."

He also asked heavy police protection, which led the auditor to remark:

"It is a sad commentary to have to try a case under police guard."

Attorneys Silverman and Adlow vied with each other in interposing objections to the hearing going on. Adlow said he had filed a demurrer and wanted assurances that all his rights would be protected.

ORDERS BALLOTS IN.

Silverman declared questions of law should be settled before the business at hand was taken up. The auditor said his chief interest was in getting the ballots to the hearing room and starting proceedings.

Adlow again interrupted to point out that Revere was now in the recount and should be represented.

"Friend Is True; Sweetheart You Love"

Providence, Sept. 30.—Difference between a sweetheart and a "friend" was explained today in the Standish divorce case by 18-year-old Ella A. Williamson, high school girl witness for Granville S. Standish, Jr., after she denied wanting Standish's affection.

"I have another friend," said Miss Williamson.

"You mean you have a sweetheart," asked Ex-Senator John McGrane, counsel for Mrs. Standish.

"No, a friend."

"What's the difference?"

"A friend is one that's true to you; a sweetheart is one that you love," said the schoolgirl.

TRIANGLE SLAYER WROTE FATEFUL POETRY

repulsed all efforts to turn them off the black, tragic road leading to the drama of the Main street bungalow.

It was a startling dissolution of a triangle born of moving time and the long absence of Constantine Leger, the husband, from home at his employments.

PROMISED TO QUIT.

For eight months the affair between Clark and Mrs. Leger had been progressing steadily toward denouement, but although it was gossip throughout Leominster, Leger himself was the only one who did not know of it.

Six months ago he received his first inkling and, confronting his wife, took her into the presence of Police Chief Condon, who talked to her at length, finally securing a promise that she would break the friendship.

Then Chief Condon had Clarke "on the carpet," but the teacher, according to the official, was stubborn and would not promise.

Within a day of the second conference, friends declared today, Clark was back in the bungalow with Mrs. Leger and her promise had been forgotten.

Hotter and hotter burned the fires that were to consume both, that were to see Leger, maddened husband, with bared breast defying death and Clark's bullets, and that were to wither two families, leaving a wife and four children in one—fatherless—and a husband and one son in the other—motherless.

SECRET COMPOSITIONS.

The madness took the form of writings from Clark to Mrs. Leger, poems breathing of love; confidences written alone and in secret and never for the eyes of the woman to see.

One unnamed poem of but two stanzas he wrote:

My Renee I love you,
For you all the follies
Of life I resign.

My loved one and helpmeet,
My sweetheart art thou;
If ever I loved thee
My Renee 'tis now.

And all the while, the hand of death was closing down on the little bungalow of the Legers where Clark and Mrs. Leger kept their trysts.

"I knew something terrible would happen if they kept on together," both Leger and Mrs. Clark, widow the murderer and suicide, declared brokenly today.

"He had been acting queerly for a year," Mrs. Clark continued. "A week ago I got a strange telegram from him in Burlington, Vt., bearing me to go up and see him. There was no explanation.

"I could not leave my children, but I wrote him and explained. Yesterday I received a letter from his parents saying that he had left Burlington. That was the last I heard of him until the police came and told me the terrible story last night."

There was cold and bitter drama enacted in the little house where death moved in, dispossessing happiness; where ignorance: Fate led to the startled door the steps of a husband long away and not expected.

There was surprise, suspicion, the anger that narrows lids over eyes that glint at pin-points.

Threats, defiance—breast bared to the crash of lead—the weakening quivering of a craven hand.

Denouement, flight; reverberations that froze the blood. A body tumbling down a staircase, red and sodden. And tragedy stalked while the staring eyes of a bereft husband looked on and while, far away in Boston, the son of the murdered mother and the son of the man who slew her laughed together—chums—at the comedy of the show on stage and looked upon life as pretty good.

At the absentee home of Constantine Leger—a bungalow at No. 733 Main street—there was darkness as Leger, returning from the Hotel Greylock at Williamstown, where he had been stationed for a year, approached his door.

He was joyous with anticipation over the home-coming and, because he wished to surprise his wife and son and make his welcome more spontaneous, he had given them no inkling of his return.

Setting down his heavy bags, the husband knocked on the door. There was no response. Again, and in perplexity, he knocked. And still there came no answer to the summons, from within.

It was long minutes before the fragile tattoo fell upon the ears of Leger; was answered by the voice of his wife through the stout oak—and her voice was tremulous as she unfastened the door.

The edge was dulled from his expectation, but Leger held out his arms, only to have his wife, unresponsive, recoil into the shadows.

LOOKS INTO GUN.

Then, with a suddenness that startled the homecomer, a man stepped forward out of the blackness of the room, and Leger looked into a gun. It was held in the hand of Don Clark, his neighbor.

"You'd better get out of here before I kill you," Leger's astounded ears heard his neighbor warn.

Then, for the first time, Leger noted that his wife's arms was awry; she was not fully dressed. She had been alone in the house with another man.

In a cold, bitter fury Leger ripped open the buttons of his vest, tore away the fastenings of the shirt beneath and bared his breast.

"I'm a man," he snarled. What are you? If you wish to kill me, go ahead."

For a drama-tensed second the two men faced each other, eyes flaming hate—but then Clark stopped. His hand wavered, eyes veered.

Leger, with a gesture of derision, turned on his wife bitterly.

"I will let you choose between us," he said. "Take your choice, Clark, here, or myself. I'll go outside and wait for you: If you come—soon—I will be satisfied."

RETURNS WITH POLICEMAN.

Shrugging, he wheeled, groped for the knob of the door, crossed the threshold and went out into the night. The door slammed behind him.

Leger, enraged, raced away for the police station; then, coming back more to normal, decided to use the telephone rather than cover the great distance twice, with the resulting delay.

Warning headquarters that Clark was armed, the distracted husband described the situation and Police Chief Conlon dispatched Officer Caisse to Leger's aid.

Once more, accompanied by the officer, Leger went to his home and they entered through the rear door.

"What's this all about?" Patrolman Caisse asked of Clark.

"You get out of here or I'll kill you," Clark threatened in return and the gleaming pistol came up on the level with the policeman's head.

In a flash Caisse had left his feet in a lunge for Clark, the school teacher.

But Clark, dodging the outflung arms of the policeman, turned and clattered from the kitchen and ran upstairs, to where Mrs. Leger had retreated between her husband's departure and his return.

TWO FATEFUL SHOTS

As the officer, having recovered his balance, ran in pursuit, the sound of a shot rang out and a body came thumping, thumping down the staircase, to stop, stark and still, at its foot. It was Mrs. Leger, dead from a bullet.

Then came a second shot and the body of Clark crumpled at the stairway top, slid down a few steps and halted. He too was dead and the triangle was shattered.

Broken now, and sobbing, Leger dropped upon the body of his pretty wife, to be lifted to his feet when Chief Conlon and another officer, hastening to the scene but too late, entered the house.

Then came a second shot and the body of Clark crumpled at the stairway top, slid down a few steps and halted. He too was dead and the triangle was shattered.

Broken now, and sobbing, Leger dropped upon the body of his pretty wife, to be lifted to his feet when Chief Conlon and another officer, hastening to the scene but too late, entered the house.

Officer Caisse was attempting to give Clark first aid, but the bullet had torn a hole through his mouth, upward into the brain, and he was dead.

Meanwhile the wife and three children of Clark lay asleep in their home only a short distance down the street. Another of Clark's sons, Alberton Clark, was at a Boston theatre in company with Arthur Somes, son of Mrs. Leger by an earlier marriage.

"My Renee, I Love You," Says Slayer's Poem

With poetry and with penned lines of adoration, Don C. Clark worshipped Mrs. Irene Leger, young Leominster mother, whom he killed before taking his life in the shattering of a triangle.

Not the ragged, unrythmic effusions of most love-sick amateurs at writing, were these of Don Clark, but verses startling in their swing and conveyance of thought.

DREAM SHIPS.

Somewhere out there is a sailing,
Afloat on the ocean of life,
Just clearing its way through the seas of dismay,
And laughing at trouble and strife.

Staunch are its spirits and timbers
And straight is the course that it steers,
Undaunted and strong, it goes blowing along,
Its wake full of trouble and tears.

What matters it, friend, if you're sailing,
Enjoy your brief fit of the blues
'Tis fate but collecting her dues.

Sun without rain would be awful,
The tears splash life's troubles away,
The ship of your soul nears its ultimate goal
In spite of your feelings today.

Somewhere out there it is sailing,
And on through life's storms it will reel;
Its timbers may groan and its course be unknown,
God's hand turns the spokes of the wheel.

Kind you must be and courageous,
If up to the heights you would win,
And hearts must be pure for the way to be sure,
When dream ships to mortals come in.

My Renee I love you,
I know you are mine,
For you all the follies,
Of life I resign:

My loved one and helpmeet,
My sweetheart art thou,
If ever I loved thee
My Renee 'tis now.

Encircling the poem in pencil is the following:

"As I sit here in this train I am analyzing my heart. As God is my judge, I love this girl with all my life. If she cannot have Arthur and come back to Cortice, yet will I love her always.

"I adore her in the secret of my own heart and before God I worship her. I am sure I would always be kind and loving. These words she will probably never see, but, dear God, Thou knowest my heart and keep me true to my love in all things. Much do I thank Thee that Thou hast kept me pure thus far and if I do not see her dear face again still wilt Thou, dear God, keep pure even in my thought.

"Though I might have been led into temptation, thoughts of the woman I love have kept me true and good."

LIVES ALONE IN NEW YORK APARTMENT

New York, Sept. 30 (Universal).—William C. DeMille, noted director for Famous Players-Lasky, author and playwright, is occupying bachelor quarters in the Park Chambers Hotel, this city.

His wife, Anna George DeMille, lecturer, and daughter of Henry George, single-taxer, has been secluded somewhere else in New York City since her arrival last week from Norway, where she went for the International Land Conference.

With her are their daughters, Agnes George DeMille, 21, and Margaret George DeMille, 18.

Whether the separation of the pair is to be made permanent by the courts, even William DeMille doesn't know. He said he has not consulted attorneys.

"What the future may hold nobody can say," he added.

But William DeMille stamped this report as untrue.

"Our differences have not been caused by her interest in women's clubs and lecturing. In fact, I have always been very sympathetic in all her efforts, as I believe that it is excellent for any woman to have her own interests."

WOMEN GREET RESCUED MEN WITH KISSES

Special Dispatch to the Boston Evening American.

Ironwood, Mich., Sept. 30.—With their grim experience a fast waning memory, the 43 men rescued from the Pabst mine here were regaining their strength and returning to their loved ones today.

Cheers and kisses greeted the men who had prayed daily that rescue would come in time.

Only two were in a serious condition, Thomas Trewartha, stout-hearted shift boss, and Mat Stulich, a miner.

Ironwood, its tears and cheers of the rescue hour already forgotten, has returned to its normal state of complacency and mining. There is talk of an investigation into the collapse of the hanging wall that imprisoned the men 727 feet under ground, but the men themselves are not interested in this proposed investigation.

They are resting on cots in Grand View Hospital, recounting tales of their harrowing experience.

Jacob Louma, father of nine children, said:

"I guess we could have stood it another week. It wasn't so bad.

BOSTON, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1926

FIRST OF HALL TRIALS MAY BEGIN OCT. 11

Somerville, N. J., Sept. 30 (Universal).—Preparations are being made to begin the Hall-Mills trials on October 11.

Alexander Simpson, special prosecutor, will ask permission on Saturday to have separate trials for the four persons indicted in the murders of the Rev. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills.

If this is granted he will place Willis Stevens on trial first. This trial will be followed by those of Henry Stevens, Henry Carpender and Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, widow of the slain rector.

Simpson's investigators were stirred to renewed activity by the finding of bloody clothing and a mattress and sheets. The discovery was reported by Leonard Gray and corroborated by Robert Manley, former constable.

The articles were found in a mud-hole thirteen miles from the scene of the murder four years ago.

DUCE IN SECRET PARLEY WITH CHAMBERLAIN

Leghorn, Italy, Sept. 30 (A.P.).—Premier Mussolini received Sir Austen Chamberlain, British Foreign Secretary, aboard the yacht Giuliana in the harbor here today for their much-discussed conference, the subject of which was kept secret up to the hour of the meeting.

Mussolini, traveling in strictest incognito, left Rome last night on a special train. He spent the night at Vada, a small station 20 miles from here, and arrived in Leghorn early today.

Except for the railway officials, no one knew that the Premier was coming here, as the newspapers had mentioned several other places as possible sites for the meeting with Sir Austen.

As news of his arrival spread, flags began to appear throughout the city. The Premier and his suite were driven from the railway station to the port, where they boarded a motorboat and were taken to the Giuliana.

Shortly afterward Sir Austen, who had arrived on the yacht Dolphin, descended into a tender with his suite and was taken to the Giuliana. Premier Mussolini received Sir Austen at the gangway. They clasped hands warmly and then retired for a private conversation.

A conference of United States adjutant generals' service in New England will be held at Army Base, South Boston, Monday morning.

AT ODDS ON CUSTODY OF TWO CHILDREN

SEEKS DIVORCE

As Jesse N. Sargent of Somerville changed an allegation of infidelity to that of desertion his suit will not be fought.

DECISION TODAY

Mrs. Leonora D. Sargent of Winchester, snapped with son, Jesse, Jr., wants the custody of their two children.

DROPS FIGHT ON NEW CHARGE AT START

Agreement to change an allegation of infidelity to that of desertion in the divorce action of Jesse N. Sargent of Somerville against his wife, Lenora O. Sargent of Winchester, was reached, lawyers informed Judge Harris in Middlesex Probate Court, as trial of the suit was about to begin.

The wife, according to counsel, will not contest her husband's suit on the new grounds. Sargent has previously won a verdict of $12,000 from Michael J. Tyrrell, a former boarder in the Sargent home, whom he accused of alienating Mrs. Sargent's affections.

Custody of a daughter, Constance, 20, and a son, Jesse Jr., 19, is asked by Sargent, but no agreement has been reached on this matter. Disposition of the case will be made today.

NO WORD FROM VESSELS IN NEW STORM'S PATH

Washington, Sept. 30 (A.P.).—The weather bureau announced today it had been without reports since yesterday morning from vessels within 400 miles of the centre of the tropical disturbance between Bermuda and the Bahamas. The storm was believed, however, to have been of slight intensity.

MILLIONS FOR BETTER PHONE SERVICE

An appropriation of $3,252,096 for new construction was made today by the executive committee of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company, bringing the total appropriations for this purpose during the current year to $28,402,877.

In Greater Boston large sums will be sent for changes and improvements in Beach, Kenmore, Roxbury, University and Porter central exchanges, and in Wakefield and Revere. Most of the appropriation, which is for the entire territory served by the company in five New England States, is for routine additions to plant.

RADIO TO TELL HOW TO SAVE CHILDREN

Because 15 per cent. of the school children of Essex County are underweight and because the Essex County Health Association wishes to continue its education campaign which already is reported to have cut the tuberculosis death rate in half, a radio talk will be given from WEEI at 2.10 p. m. Saturday, to acquaint the public with the need of funds, both from the sale of Christmas seals and supplemental contributions.

Ancient Club Burned

London, Sept. 30 (I.N.S.).—The fashionable Cocoa Tree Club in St. James street, near Piccadilly, founded in 1746 and once the haunt of Swift and Addison, was destroyed by fire today.

future wars, Europe relying upon us to finance them.

ALSO, DEMOCRATS walk gingerly over the eggs of prohibition, planning a memorial to Congress, asking that each State be allowed to determine for itself "what constitutes intoxicating liquor."

THE COUNTRY will have to rely on President Coolidge to get us out of the World Court, after he and his Senate have got us half way into it. The European nations will not let us in if we really reserve our independence and forbid them to say what we shall do with our men, our money and our laws.

If they insist on deciding the questions vitally important to America, President Coolidge, who is a Vermonter, and thus far free from Anglomania, will undoubtedly s'y out.

AS FOR PROHIBITION, there will not be any change in the Volstead law until after 1928, anyhow, and perhaps not then for a generation. Prohibition, needless to say, will stay in the Constitution through this century.

Nothing short of a revolution could take it out, just as a revolution was required in Russia to bring back vodka, which had been buried before the Czar was buried.

MR. CAPPER of Kansas, who represents farmers in the Senate, has cheerful news for President Coolidge and other Republicans. He says the farmer now is better off than at any time since the World War. Like a good Republican, Senator Capper says this is due to the Republican party. The main thing is that the farmer is better satisfied than he was. Mr. Capper knows.

REALLY BIG NEWS for the farmer comes from Paris. An automobile has been built and successfully operated, using wood instead of gasoline, as motor power. Wood or charcoal, heated in an apparatus attached to the car, provides gas that runs the motor.

A motor bus, carrying fourteen, using the new power, made a commercial cruise of France, 3,280 miles, at a cost of $15. That means travel for one-third of a cent a mile per passenger, which should interest railroad owners.

IT IS SAID seriously, by responsible people, that the new fuel will operate a light motor truck for one-fifth the present fuel cost. If the farmer should run out of "gas" he could stop at a woodpile, put a little wood in his retort and be on his way.

One thing is certain—in this or some other way, human beings will make themselves independent of the gasoline supply as they made themselves independent of whale oil by using kerosene, and independent of kerosene by using electric light.

MR. HEBERLEIN discovers in Java "a complete skull of the 'missing link,'" called Pithecanthropus Erectus, which means "monkey-shaped man standing up." That interests intensely the scientists of the Smithsonian Institution and you. Pithecanthropus, according to science, is your first name.

IT IS A PITY that the skull of our ancient ancestor cannot tell us what life was like in those Javanese jungles when monkey-shaped men hunted big animals and the animals hunted them, when evolution had practically ended in the physical body and was continuing inside the brain.

WE PRAISE the inventor of the sewing machine, steam engine, wireless and aeroplane. Who invented the sharp flint at the end of a club, giving to weak man a blow stronger than that of a tiger's paw?

Who first lifted a sail to blow a log across the water? What genius first made a bent piece of wood send a sharp arrow through the air, man's first conquest of space?

RUSSIA IS FAR FROM FREE, SAYS HAYS

All industries and public utilities in Russia, and even religion are directed towards the betterment of the present regime, Arthur Garfield Hays, counsel for the Civil Liberties Union told the Harvard Student Liberal Club.

Mr. Hays added that the courts were purely political and that all Russians are attempting to do what is best for the Soviet government. He has just returned from Russia where he has been investigating conditions.

"There is no evidence of socialism or communism in Russian economic life," said Mr. Hays, "since industry still deals with the payment of wages and would probably have no objection to profits on exported goods.

He said the Russian people were far from free and that the only free speech in the country is that of Russian and American journalists.

Mr. Hayes was counsel for H. L. Mencken when the latter was arrested in Boston last Spring for selling his magazine, "The American Mercury," which had been banned because of an article called "Hatrack" which it contained.

He also defended Countess Cathcart and assisted Clarence Darrow in the Scopes evolution case at Dayton, Tenn., two years ago.

Tunney's Story Lauded by 'Gold Star' Mother

A "GOLD STAR" mother prayed for "Gene" Tunney to win the world's championship because of his clean record in athletics, life and war.

Now that he is world-famous, this mother—Mrs. Clara Hurd, of No. 604 Essex street, Lynn—is overjoyed at the opportunity to read his own personally-told life story in the Boston Evening American.

As a woman who gave one son to her country and had another in the service, and as an active member of the American Legion Auxiliary, Mrs. Hurd says:

"I think that I manifested more interest in 'Gene' Tunney last week than any other woman in the State. My sympathies were with Mr. Tunney because I realized that as a former Marine who served in France he was on a par with my two sons who served overseas, one dying in action there.

"'I prayed for Mr. Tunney's success and I was happy when I heard he was the winner. As a 'Gold Star' mother I am going to read his story in the Boston American with interest.

"I urge all 'Gold Star' mothers, and all members of the American Legion Auxiliary, to read the story. Tunney is a credit to the Marines, a credit to himself, to his family and to his buddies who died on the battlefield."

HOW 43 BURIED MINERS WERE RESCUED

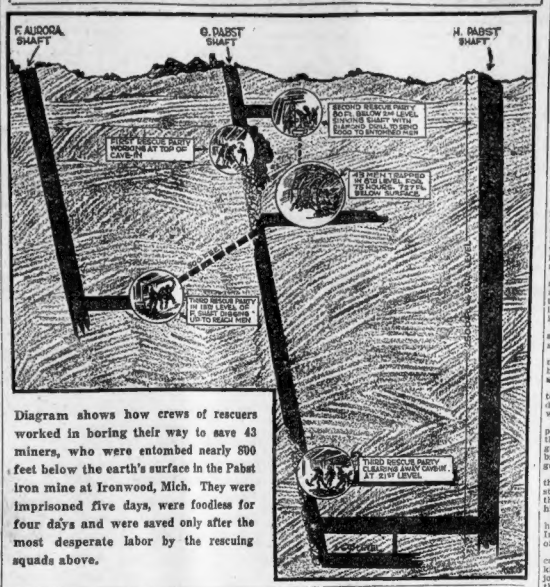

Diagram shows how crews of rescuers worked in boring their way to save 43 miners, who were entombed nearly 800 feet below the earth's surface in the Pabst iron mine at Ironwood, Mich. They were imprisoned five days, were foodless for four days and were saved only after the most desperate labor by the rescuing squads above.

MINERS PRAYED DAILY; KISSES FOR RESCUED

We were only afraid no one would reach us until it was too late.

"We felt pretty safe. After the first slide we got busy and blocked up the shift with timbers so that no more falling rock could clog us up.

"Some of the men had their lunches left, so we divided them. Then Joe Anderson showed us how to strip birch bark from some of the log supports. I smoked it and it wasn't bad. We made some tea from the bark and that helped brace us up.

"The water got into our shoes after a while and some of the men suffered from this. Many took off their shoes and wrapped their feet in pieces of blankets which we found in the safety box."

Seated beside his goodly wife, Joseph Smith told an equally thrilling story. His wife said:

"Now I can sleep again. For five nights I walked up and down in the house waiting for my husband and now I am glad he is back.

"Our little girl did not want to go to school. She said she could not do her school work while her daddy was down there."

With cheers and applause the 5,000 persons who stood about the H shaft, through which the rescue was made, greeted the rescued men as the cage brought them up from their underground prison.

As Michael Kostelo walked from the cage to a temporary first aid station his 23-year-old son, William, threw his arms about him and kissed him.

"Now I can go home," said the happy youth, who had rushed to Ironwood from Milwaukee at news of the mine disaster.

As Leo Goodwin trudged from the cage his sister, Grace, embraced and kissed him. Many women wept with joy as they stood shivering before the mine shaft. Young girls shouted a welcome to the men as they passed. Veteran miners, pals of the men who had been close to death, merely clasped hands. Among them there was no need of words.

D. G. Kerr, vice-president of the United States Steel Corporation, overcoat drawn tightly about him, cap pulled well down on his head, waited at the mouth of the mine until the last rescued man had reached the surface.

First to reach the imprisoned men was George Hawes of Chicago, safety expert of the Pullman Company, and a former employe of the mine. He was met by Tom Trewartha, shift boss, who, with two others, were on "guard duty" while their comrades slept.

"How are you?" Hawes asked.

"We are all O. K. Forty-three men all right," answered Trewartha.

MISS $40,000 IN $1700 ROBBERY

Battering through three doors of a big vault in the office of the Potter Drug & Chemical Company, Malden, crackemen today looted strongboxes of more than $1,700 in cash and valuables but overlooked $40,000 in negotiable securities.

Part of the loot belonged to employes of the company who had stored valuables in the vault. The combination of the vault was battered off wit ha sledge hammer. Entrance was gained to the office by cutting a screen on an unlocked window.

WIFE TELLS OF 60 BEATINGS

Sixty times during their married life her husband beat her, Mrs. Ethel B. Levine of Waltham testified in Middlesex Probate Court.

But Albert, her husband, a Waltham shoe dealer, vociferously protested he was being framed.

"Did you do anything to your husband when he hit you?" queried Albert's counsel.

"If I had, I'd have had pretty flowers sent to me," tartly replied Ethel. Even the court attaches laughed.

The judge took the case under advisement.

EX-HUSBAND DECLARES THAT AIMEE THREATENED TO KILL HIM

of their son, Ralph Porter McPherson, then seven years old, was given to the mother.

The affidavits which describe the married life of Aimee Semple McPherson were taken at a hearing before Robert T. Burbank, a standing master in chancery, and were later offered in open court.

SAYS AIMEE HIT HIM.

Three depositions were taken, one from the husband, another from his mother and a third from Elizabeth Reid, a boarder.

McPherson, then 30 years old and a resident at No. 17 Claverick street, Providence, said:

"Two and a half years ago, my wife deserted me and had no cause for doing so. She left us and took the child with her. She also hit me a number of times, pulled my hair and tore the sirt off my back. She also threatened to take my life and to take her own life. I never gave either of them any cause for all their abuse of me."

McPherson's mother, the next witness said:

"She deserted him a number of times, too many times, and left him alone with his small child. The last time she deserted him was two and a half years ago, and since then they have not lived together.

"She hit him a number of times, ripped the shirt off hi sback, pulled his hair, tor esome of his clothes and threatened to take his life."

Former acquaintances of the evangelist, who knew her when she lived in Providence, recalled her today, as an "odd stick."

Mrs. Martha Stevenson, a boarder in the McPherson home said the husband was heartbroken when Mrs. McPherson left him "flat to go evangelizing in Florida" and failed to return.

It was only after long waiting and hoping that McPherson resorted to divorce, she said.

"She took her two children with her," said Mrs. Stevenson, "and instead of coming back went on to California." Mrs. Stevenson now lives at No. 276 Washington street.

Edward Leeve another boarder in the McPherson home, said:

"There never was another woman like Aimee McPherson, a woman whom everybody liked, but nobody could quite understand."

Elizabeth Reid, forty-seven, a boarder, testified at the time of the trial, that Mrs. McPherson's conduct toward her husband was "very cruel in every way. She left him many times. She has a terrible temper. She is a wonderful actress and can throw a fit any time. I heard her threaten to kill him and I know she abused him other ways without cause."

A final decree was granted on November 6, 1921. Mrs. McPherson, who failed to contest the suit, was granted custody of the son.

The house in which Harold and Aimee McPherson, together with Mrs. Stevenson and Leever, lived was in Claverick street and was owned by McPherson's mother, who let her son and daughter-in-law occupy it as their home while they were conducting tent services in Providence.

"HONEST" DIVORCE.

McPherson's attorney was Leonard W. Horton, who is now in State prison for complicity in the Rhode Island "divorce mill" in which many divorces were illegally procured. Horton insists that the McPherson divorce was above board.

"Harold McPherson was a fine man and his mother was like a mother to Aimee," said Mrs. Stevenson. "They told me that mother sold a motorboat for $700 to equip Aimee with funds to go to Florida and Aimee was to return it, but never did.

"They never even heard from her after she went away. Her husband worshipped her and has never been the same since she failed to come back. She used their joint savings for her trip South and took the children, and from Florida went to California. Her husband is now in Oceola, Florida."

Leever, who is a locomotive engineer living now in Adelaide avenue, said he had always thought the couple happily married and he was much surprised to learn of the divorce shortly after it was granted in 1921.

"McPherson never lived here permanently any more than Aimee did, but traveled with her all the time and thus came here when she held services in a tent in East Providence," he said.

CALLS AIMEE "ODD STICK."

"Aimee McPherson was an odd stick and there isn't another woman in the world like her. Before fame came her way she and her husband held their little evangelistic meetings here and they certainly were enthusiastic in heralding their doctrines to the world.

"I remember Harold McPherson coming to his mother's home in Claverick street perfectly. He was always with Aimee. They had an odd-looking machine covered with Bible inscriptions, and they caused considerable comment and speculation. No one could quite understand them or figure them out:

"Some of the banners and signs on the old automobile bore the quotations, 'The Wages of Sin is Death,' 'Make Your Peace with God,' and 'Come to God if You Would Be Saved.'

"Aimee was a nice woman, although odd. I liked her and I guess everybody did who knew her. She held a strange charm for all. Her personality was wonderful.

DIVORCE WAS SURPRISE

"When McPherson got his divorce it was a surprise to me because I always thought they were a happy, congenial couple. That's how I remember that McPherson was not living here alone for two years before his marriage. He was always with Aimee when I saw him.

"Two years ago, McPherson got a job as bookkeeper with the Rhode Island Hospital Trust Company. Before that he never did any work, so far as I know, except accompany his wife on her evangelistic trips.

"Aimee is innocent of the charges brought against her, I feel sure. She was too sincere in her work to be guilty of such charges."

Horton, who acted as McPherson's attorney in the divorce, granted in Superior Court, April 12, 1921, said that it was uncontested by Mrs McPherson.

"As I remember Mrs. McPherson was in Florida at the time," Horton said. "She was properly served, but she never showed up. All requirements of the law were made in her case. I cannot recall what the acts of cruelty were."

ONCE A NEWSIE.

Horton said that Mr. and Mrs. McPherson had separated some time before McPherson sought his freedom in the court. He said the point that impressed him most about the case was the fact that the McPhersons, engaged in religious work and "trying to make people good," should separate and seek a divorce on the grounds of cruelty.

Elizabeth Reid, matron at the women's prison at Howard, who was a witness for McPherson, testified that Mrs. McPherson was a good actress and could throw herself into a fit at any time she wanted. She was a boarder in the McPherson home. Horton said he didn't doubt this statement.

"I knew McPherson well. He was newsboy and delivered papers when I studied law in Judge Vincent's office years before he brought the case against his wife," said Horton. "He was handsome, with red cheeks. What he did after selling newspapers I do not know. At the time of his divorce his legal residence was in a house in Claverick street.

"Miss X" Ready to Take Stand at Aimee's Trial

Los Angeles, Sept. 30 (I.N.S.).—With the preliminary hearing of Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson and her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy held on conspiracy charges, entering the fourth day, Mrs. McPherson's story of how she was kidnaped and spirited away to Mexico was still being read into the record today.

When this is concluded, Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman-Sellaff, who said Mrs. McPherson offered her money to produce a "Miss X" probably will be placed on the stand.

Mrs. Sellaff, also held on conspiracy charges, declared the "Miss X" was to have posed as the companion of Kenneth G. Ormiston radio operator, at Carmel. The State is attempting to prove that this woman was really Mrs. McPherson and that her story of being kidnaped was a hoax.

The outstanding features of the hearing were the sudden collapse of Mrs. Kenendy during the proceedings and the inference that Mrs. McPherson has signaled to August England city marshal of Carmel, a witness on the stand.

While being asked the color of the hair of Mrs. McPherson, whose photographs, he admitted, had been shown to him by an unidentified man before he came to the hearing, Mrs. McPherson removed her hat and England promptly said the hair was "red." he denied that Mrs. McPherson had signalled him

THROWN OFF FOOTBALL TEAM, BEATS COACH

Des Moines, Ia., Sept. 30.—George Van Ost, sophomore high school pupil, may be "yellow" and a poor football player, in the opinion of Assistant Coach Willis Piper, but he does pack a mean punch. Mr. Piper knows.

While the police are seeking George with a warrant, Mr. Piper is to be on his way to California, nursing a black eye and a fractured cheek bone. George gave him both. George belted Mr. Piper was responsible for his not making the football team, so he called on Mr. Piper in the instructor's office. There was a lively thirty seconds, and then George disappeared. He is believed

FLORIDA GROWS RUBBER TREES

Washington, Sept. 30 (A.P.).—The para, or Brazilian rubber tree, the principal source of the world's supply, can be grown in Florida, it has been discovered by the Department of Agriculture, and, while plantations like those of the East Indies could not be operated for lack of cheap labor, different systems of production are possible.

Recently a small levee or para rubber tree was found growing at Palm Beach, where it had stood in the open for nearly 25 years under favorable conditions. Its survival makes it plain, the department said today, that hevea is not to be classed among the most delicate ultra-tropical types of plants.

Cobham Reaches Marseilles

20 GERMAN IS KILLED

Germersheim, Germany, Sept. 30 (A.P.).—Feeling against the French troops of occupation, aroused by the killing of a German civilian here last Monday, was increased today by news that another German had been killed by a French trooper at Treves, near the Luxembourg border.

An official German report of the incident says four French cyclist troopers rode into a group of German pedestrians, an argument ensued, during which one of the Frenchmen, allegedly without provocation, killed a German named Holstein. The Frenchman was arrested.

Police Probe Fire

Investigation of a fire in an unoccupied four-story dwelling at No. 612 Harrison avenue was launched today immediately after the blaze was extinguished by police of East Dedham street station and Inspectors of the Fire Prevention Bureau. The fire was confined to the second floor. Damage was $100.

"Old Maid" to Be No More; She's Passing On

Chicago, Sept. 29 (A.P.).—The "old maid" is disappearing, thanks to higher learning, Dr. Nancy E. Scott, of the Kalamazoo Michigan normal school says in an article in the Sociology Journal of the University of Chicago on the effects on the home of higher education of women.

Woman has not been unfitted for marriage and a home because she obtained a college education, but has become more able to make a home through the higher learning, Dr. Scott said.

$40,000 NAVY TARGET, LOST IN GALE, IS FOUND

Washington, Sept. 30 (A.P.).—The $40,000 navy target raft, lost off the Bahama Islands in the hurricane that swept across Florida, has been located and now is being towed to Guantanamo, Cuba, for fleet gunnery exercises.

CHARGES STIR WAKEFIELD

Charges against several members of the police department of Wakefield are expected to be made tonight at a meeting of the board of selectmen, which will hear the case of Patrolman Harry F. Russell, under suspension and charged with conduct unbecoming an officer. Russell is charged with assaulting a civilian.

The meeting was called by the Wakefield Civic League, which, it is expected, will level sharp criticism at the police department during the course of the hearing.

Hints of charges involving the whole department stirred wide interest in the case and it is expected that more than 1,000 will jam the hall. Fifteen witnesses will be called.

Follies Girl

ROBBER WORE PATCHED PANTS

Without frill or flourish a thug walked into the Westland avenue parking space early today, pushed a revolver under the night caretaker's nose and stole $12, according to the report to the police.

The victim obtained a good description, even to a patch on the man's trousers. He described him as about 23 to 25 years old, weighing from 125 to 130 pounds, of dark complexion, with dark mustache, and wore a blue suit.

LEGINSKI TO ADDRESS HARVARD ORCHESTRA

Miss Ethel Leginska, internationally known pianist and woman conductor, and also director of the Boston Philharmonic Orchestra, which will open its first season next month in Mechanics Pavilion, will speak at the first meeting of the Sterian Orchestra of Harvard University tonight. Miss Leginska has been the subject of much interest in the past due to her spasmodic disappearances.

DISPUTE OVER TOUR OF QUEEN MARIE IS DENIED

Bucharest, Rumania, Sept. 30 (A.P.).—Persistent rumors published abroad that differences in the royal family would prevent Queen Marie's trip to the United States met with positive denial today from a most authoritative source.

The Queen and her party, it was stated, will leave Bucharest Saturday for Paris, sailing from Cherbourg October 12 on the Leviathan, as originally announced.

HAS ANNIVERSARY

Buddy Somerset today is celebrating the first birthday she has spent in the United States. She is an English girl and sister of Pat Somerset, comedian.

SECOND ROTARY SECTION MEETS

Poland Spring, Me., Sept. 30.—Four hundred Rotarians, the second section of the conclave of the thirty-first district of Rotary, arrived here today as the Rotarians of the first section took their departure.

A masquerade ball was the closing event of the first section, with the Cambridge Club, President L. W. Hudgins, in charge. Academic caps and gowns were worn by the Cambridge women who marched in with the men, who wore the aprons and caps of artisans. The Framingham boys' band led the procession. The final luncheon was in charge of the Newton and Wakefield clubs.

Finds Man Dead in Room

Asbur Mordecia, 47, was found dead in bed today in his room at a lodging house in Hanson street, South End. Dr. Seth Darley notified Medical Examiner Timothy Leary, who ordered the body removed to the City Hospital morgue for an autopsy. James Carins, a fellow lodger, found the body.

LOVE LETTERS OF 'TRIANGLE' SLAYER

Private Office, The Greylock,
Sept. 28, 1926.

My Dearest Irene—You can imagine how happy I am now when I heard your voice. Believe me, I almost fainted with joy. I am happy, sweetheart, but I hope you will not blame me for worrying, as I didn't hear from you since last I talked with you on the phone. I am sorry to hear Uncle Artie is going to California with Harriett and Mrs. Roscoe, but I hope it will be better for him and he will be happy, anyhow, as long as he has his child with him.

If I write you something in the letter this afternoon, please forgive me; I was not in my senses, as I did not know what to think as I didn't hear a word from you and I sent my letter special delivery. I will send you this one the same way as I don't want you to be under a bad impression. I have the same trouble you have. I am in bad shape since yesterday. I was glad to hear from Arthur and he didn't lose the chain I enclosed in the letter. It is a little cold up here now. Lovey, if it is cold home don't forget to build a little fire, even with wood to kill the chill as I don't want you to get cold.

I will write you again tomorrow. Kiss Arthur for me and tell him to burn the papers in the cellar after school and he will get better pay for it. To clean the cellar he will have a little more besides the dollar he owes you, and he will pay you—make nice pocket to put it.

My Irene, you can imagine how happy I am. I am happy long because I heard your voice and you are at home and as I am very happy, my mind is quiet.

Kis Arthur again for me and tell him to study his school lessons.

With all my love and hugs and kisses to my Irene from CASTOS.

The Greylock, Aug. 24, 1926.

My dear Irene, I wrote you last night and today. I didn't intend to write you as I have no news to tell you, but I am writing you these few lines. I am in bad shape today. I have a terrible pain around my heart. I thought it would go but still God knows how I am standing on my feet. I can't get a full breath. I don't know what is the cause of it. This afternoon when I came to my room I rubbed with alcohol but got no relief.

As soon as I am going to bed I intend to put a mustard plaster on to see if it will help me. I can't stand—a few times I thought it was my last moment—but I hope to God to be better. Don't think for a moment that I am making too much fuss about it and I don't want you to worry about me, but I thought it was better to let you know. I was alright last night and I slept good. I was reading from 10:30 (after I finished writing) till almost midnight, but when I went to work that pain started continuously until now when I am writing it bothers me.

The only thing that worries me is that I didn't pay Mr. Toomey for the second insurance. If it was paid I don't give a damn if I die tomorrow.

How are you feeling yourself? I hope now that you are feeling better, as I am thinking of you. If you need anything for Sunday and next week call Mr. Chandler to send you what you want. When you get the bill send it to me as soon as you can.

Hoping you are better and soon well, also the children to be well.
CASTOS.

ONE INJURED IN POWDER BLAST

One man was injured, considerable property damage occurred, and a dozen houses were bombarded with rocks, when a charge of dynamite was exploded by employes of the Michael McDonough Co., on Millet road, Swampscott today.

G. M. Blease of Millet road was struck on the shoulder by a rock and sustained numerous body bruises necessitating medical treatment. The veranda of his home was torn away, awnings were ripped off, and a hole was driven through the roof.

A 30-pound rock tore through the roof of the rouse of Ernest M. Folger, No. 86 Millet road, and at the home of Havelock Made:, No. 70 Millet road, awnings were ripped and windows broken.

Numerous other residents reported that dishes were shaken from shelves, windows cracked and plaster walls broken by the blast which was set off in connection with excavating. Town officials are making an investigation.

NEW AIDE TO U. S. ATTORNEY

United States District Attorney Harold P. Williams today announced the appointment of Clifford H. Byrnes of Hingham as a member of his staff to take the place of Edward R. Hale of Haverhill, resigned.

Byrnes, a graduate of Yale and Harvard Law School, has been assistant for the past four years to Col. William J. Donovan in the office of Attorney General Sargent in Washington.

Asst. U. S. Attorney Hale leaves the Federal building to take up private practice.

EVE, MINUS LEAF, PAYS VISIT TO RESTAURANT

Belgrade, Sept. 30 (I.N.S.).—The present craze for nudity in central Europe almost caused a riot in one of this city's most fashionable restaurants.

The place was crowded with diners when a taxi drew up before the entrance and a beautiful, but entirely unclad, young woman alighted.

As she came into the crowded room there was a furor. Some people jumped to their feet to depart, others jumped to their feet the better to gaze at the scene.

But, ignoring her reception, the young Eve walked with leisurely, measured pace through the rows of tables on the terrace and into the main dining room. She sat down at a table and nonchalantly waited for someone to take her order.

As a crowd of guests crowded around to hide her from the vulgar gaze, police arrived and flung their cloaks around the disturber. Later they ascertained that she was a respectable married woman with two children.

"I have only gone a step further than the modern style," she said in explanation. "Why should women not go entirely unclothed? It would be more proper."

But the judge failed to agree, and gave the modern Eve a two-day sentence.

WIFE DEFENDS OFFICER FROM HUSBAND

Mrs. Coughlin Declares That Sergeant Was Not Hiding When Spouse Arrived

Charging that her husband had been trying for two years to be rid of her, Mrs. Samuel Coughlin, wife of a Pond street, Jamaica Plain, contractor, today defended herself and Police Sergeant Michael Sullivan of the Jamaica Plain station.

Following a hearing given Sergeant Sullivan before a police trial board on charges, Coughlin and his wife filed cross suits for divorce, she charging failure to support and he unfaithfulness, naming the sergeant.

The police hearing resulted from a scene at the Coughlin house when Coughlin alleged he found Sergeant Sullivan hiding in a closet when he came home unexpectedly.

Today Mrs. Coughlin characterized Coughlin's statements as deliberate lies and declared Sergeant Sullivan, whom she was consulting regarding her husband's alleged failure to provide, was in reality in the parlor and made no attempt to hide, because he had no reason to conceal himself.

"My husband often said he would make life mean for me and now he has," said Mrs. Coughlin. "He has been trying to get rid of me for two years.

"Mr. Sullivan was not in a closet. He was in the front parlor and stayed there until my husband found him. As soon as he saw him, my husband picked up a bottle to hit him.

"Mr. Sullivan told him not to be foolish or he'd arrest him. As I didn't want any more trouble, I begged him not to make any arrests. Then my husband and brother-in-law shoved him out the door, and Mr. Sullivan walked down the stairs. Just to make more of a fuss, my husband followed him. There was no fighting, and no mention of a closet."

COOK IS ON WET PLATFORM FOR THE SENATE

Independent Candidate Denounced Prosperity Issue Raised by Senator Butler

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

An unequivocal stand in favor of modifying the Volstead Act was taken today by Washington Cook, Republican member of the Governor's Council and independent candidate for United States Senator.

Cook, in announcing his latform containing but five planks, denounced the prosperity issue raised by Senator Butler as the "bunk." Butler, he declared, will not be allowed to "hide behind the skirts of President Coolidge."

"I propose to force him into the open where he must stand or fall on his own record."

Cook declared that desite the "frantic efforts" of the Butler forces to get him to withdraw from the field, he is in the fight to the bitter end.

Here are the things that Cook stands for:

Modification of the Volstead Act.

Equal rights for women.

Old age pensions.

PAY SILENT TRIBUTE TO COURT INTERPRETER

As a tribute to the late Michael Cang'aho, Chevalier of the Legion of Honor of Italy, and official court interpreter for Middlesex County, for a number of years, who died at his home in Hingham, Judge William A. Burns, court attaches and spectators stood silently for one minute at the height of a hearing in the Superior Criminal Court, East Cambridge.

'Wash Dishes,' B. U. Tutor Tells 'Brides' Class

MRS. McDONALD

In case you haven't run into it before, that great American drama, bathing dishes, was set up today as one of the chief washouts in the rise or fall of hearth and home.

That skin you love to touch but that doesn't like to touch water is a big factor in married life, while just as big a factor is the dish towel drive against a reluctant male helpmeet by the bride unskilled in the care and upbringing of husbands.

By Mrs. Elizabeth MacDonald, director and oracle of the "Brides' Class" at Boston University, was the dishwater theory swished and sloshed today in her expounding of the theories that have made her class so successful and have started so many girls into the world champion brides' division.

WHEN TROUBLE BEGINS

For instance, Mrs. MacDonald spoke—Ha! Ha!—as follows:

"The average man's definition of a home is where he can have physical and mental comfort."

You might think Mrs. MacDonald was standing up for the husbands against her brides, especially when she said also:

"After the first rosy cloud leaves the bride and the girl reveals her former selfish self—then trouble begins."

But Mrs. MacDonald enlarged on the "home comfort" idea in a manner that might be inclined to lose her the solid husband vote—and there can be no question but that even individual husbands themselves can constitute a "solid husband vote."

BOYHOOD COMFORTS.

"When a man marries," declared Mrs. McDonald—yes, she is married herself and still has the Rev. Forrester McDonald—"he wants to have the same comforts he had at home when a boy.

"The happiest period of a man's life is when he was a boy [editor's note: "She said something!"], when his mother cooked for him, mended his clothing and did his washing.

"When he marries he wants to continue this period and program and he wants to look at his home as a haven of peace. But a good many girls today marry because they think married life is easy and comfortable.

"A man marries because he wants someone to sympathize with him, and then discovers that he hasn't found the right someone. This is at the bottom of so many divorces today.

DISHWASHING URGED.

"I teach the girls that married happiness is founded upon unselfishness. I teach them not to become good wives alone, but to become good mothers.

"But the girls today lack a thorough realization of what home really means. Dish washing is an important factor in married life, but no longer is it necessary to have a wife wash dishes and have a balky husband dry them. I teach the girls how to wash and rinse them in very hot water which makes wiping unnecessary.

"Unless a girl knows how to cook properly, there is trouble in the home also.

"Likewise, the failure of girls to keep up their appearance. Beauty has its place in the home and the girls are taught how to put their best looks forward and to be neat and charming."

PARIS-BERLIN PRESSURE ON U. S. URGED

Friendly Anti-War Alliance to Effect Debt Settlements Suggested in Press

Berlin, Sept. 30 (I.N.S.).—Jules Sauerwein, noted editor of Le Matin in Paris, today indirectly advocated exerting pressure on the United States, through a Franco-German understanding, with a view to new debt settlements.

"France and Germany realize that continued hatred can only serve the interests of the new world and of Moscow," he wrote in an article appearing here. "France will be satisfied if she gets 16,000,000,000 gold marks in railway and industrial obligations, but this requires the consent of the United States.

"However, if France and Germany appeared in Washington, hand in hand, declaring that they were through with war, and asked the United tSates if it wanted to finish the great work or assume the responsibility for new wars, I am perfectly convinced that the United States wouldn't decline. As for England, she wouldn't dare endanger such a lasting peace."

HIGHER TARIFF FORECAST BY BUTLER

Declares Prosperity and Not Prohibition Is the Real Issue

Washington, Sept. 30 (A.P.).—Another wave rippled today in the ocean of campaign argument's ebbing and flowing between Republican and Democratic spokesmen whose activities are concentrated upon the November elections which will decide the control of the Seventieth Congress.

After breakfast and luncheon engagements with President Coolidge at the White House Sen. William M Butler of Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican National Committee, brought tariff to the fore with a prediction that some of Fordney-McCumber schedules now in effect would be increased upward at the coming short session of Congress.

Senator P. G. Gerry, chairman of the Democratic Senatorial Committee, in a statement from his home State of Rhode Island, accused Republican managers of "misrepresenting the past and the present and showing no ability to formulate a program for the future."

COOLIDGE'S ATTITUDE.

Senator Gerry, however, said that "it is significant that President Coolidge now is very anxious to be regarded as outside the campaign."

"Several days ago," the Democratic chairman continued, "Senator Lawrence C. Phipps, chairman of the Republican senatorial committee, announced that the 'sole issue' this year is whether the electors wanted to sustain President Coolidge and what was the result?

"Senator Phipps made a new announcement of the campaign issues and the fate of Mr. Coolidge was not mentioned among them. Is it too much to suppose that Mr. Coolidge told Senator Phipps he did not want his fate determined by elections that give every promise of resulting in a Democratic landslide?"

SEES "SOUP KITCHENS"

Senator Gerry reiterated his prediction that there would be "soup kitchens" in New England to feed unemployed factory workers this Winter, but Senator Butler, opposed in November by former Senator David I. Walsh, denied the truth of the Democratic contention that there is no prosperity in Massachusetts.

"Our Democratic friends," Chairman Butler remarked, "are always scoring victories in July, August and September, and then promptly losing them in November, and in the present case they are playing absolutely true to form."

The Democrats, Chairman Butler said, "are rather annoyed over our prosperity issue, but it seems to appeal to the people."

Prohibition, he concluded, is not a principal issue in Massachusetts.

M'QUHAE WILL SING AT SHOW

The radio season in New England is on with a rush, according to barometrical observations taken at the third day of the Sixth Annual Boston Radio Exposition in Mechanics Hall.

Yearly Boston's radio show ushers in the Winter radio season and if early reports are a criterion New England is assured of the largest radio year in history.

From the theatrical standpoint the sixth annual exposition is one of the greatest demonstration s ever staged in New England. Announcement of the personal appearance tonight of Allen McQuhae, the Irish tenor, caused widespread interest.

His appearance was made possible through the personal cooperation of C. W. McDowell, convention manager of the Atwater Kent Manufacturing Company. This was accomplished through the courtesy of A. Atwater Kent, of Philadelphia, who offered to send his star to the Boston Radio Exposition when he found the Watertown Cord Orchestra would not be able to return to New York Thursday for their regular WEAF broadcast.

This concert in Mechanics Hall by this nationally known concert artist will be his first appearance in Boston in more than two years. His only previous Boston engagement was with the Handel and Hayden Society in the Oratorio, "The Messiah."

HUNTING PARENTS OF 'DESERTED' CHILDREN

Abandonment of two small children at a Roxbury hospital started police today on a hunt for Mrs. Josephine Fuschetti and her husband, Carmine, of Revere, who according to authorities, disappeared shortly after the children were left at the institution.

The children were let at the Children's Hospital, Longwood avenue Roxbury, a week ago, by Mrs. Fuschetti, for treatment. When she failed to make further visits, an investigation was started and Revere police found that the parents of the children moved away from No 547 Mountain avenue, Revere. They left no address. Both parents are about twenty-five years old.

WORKS NIGHTS BURYING BANK'S $30,000; CAUGHT

Galt, Ont., Sept. 30 (A.P.).—Working at night, Harvey J. McNeil, ledger-keeper in a local bank, took $30,000 from the bank's safe and buried it a mile from the town, according to police.

Burial of the money did not save him from being caught. Today he was a prisoner. Police quoted him as confessing.

All but $5 of the money was recovered. McNeil lived over the bank.

Eat and sleep under the same roof. Many rooms with board just like home listed in the Classified Ads. Classification 37.

SPRINGFIELD CATHEDRAL HAS 60TH ANNIVERSARY

Springfield, Sept. 30 (A.P.).—The 60th anniversary of the consecration of St. Michael's Cathedral was observed today with the celebration of pontifical high mass by Bishop Thomas M. O'Leary, assisted by Rev. George E. L. Connor, rector, and other clergy of the Cathedral. A large number of visiting priests attended. The cathedral parish is now the largest in the city. Rev. M. P. Gallagher, the first pastor, mortgaged his own property in order to clear the church of debt.

Name Tilson's Opponent

New Haven, Ct., Sept. 30 (A.P.).—John E. Doughan, former New Haven town clerk, has been named by the Democrats in the third congressional district to oppose Representative John Q. Tilson, Republican floor leader of the House.

FITZ RAPS N. E. COUNCIL

John S. Lawrence, chairman of the New England Council, is criticised by former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, for ignoring industrial workers in appointments to the council.

Mr. Fitzgerald, speaking at the Central Square Business Men's Association of Cambridge, said that the two big industries of Massachusetts, the textile and boot and shoe trades, were ignored when the Council met in Worcester last fall and made its appointments.

GETTING THE NEWS "PIPING HOT"

BILLY AND EDDIE GORMAN KEEP UP TO DATE

These boys, who are doing turns daily at the Olympia, Washington street theatre, keep their jingles "newsy" by reading the Boston Evening American and Boston Advertiser. Formerly they had to read from 200 to 300 papers daily to get "jingle material." Now they can get all they want from two.

Jingling the News

By BILLY AND EDDIE GORMAN.

Our "Singing Reporters," who are also appearing this week at the Olympia Washington Street Theatre.

Suzanne Lenglen arrived, her engagements to keep,
And now Mr. "Pyle" will reap coin in a heap.
Suzanne made appearance in dainty sport jacket,
And said she's a "pro" 'cause there's money to back it.

A Lynn couple parted in year nineteen ten.
After sixteen long years they're together again.
They were both to blame for the quarrel, they insist.
Sixteen long years of sorrow were sealed when they kissed,
To start sixteen years thinking of joys they have missed.

Jamaica copper was trapped with another man's wife.
The joke is, the cop had to run for his life.
To a closet upstairs the cop made his retreat,
But later the husband chased him to the street.
The moral is: "Coppers should tramp their own beat."

Estelle claims that she'll stick to Jack through it all.
He's still her big champion and never will fall.
Jack Kearns and Jack Dempsey had their big dispute,
'Cause Jack Dempsey thought that Estelle was real cute.
He married a "Taylor" and now has a "suit."

Police seek would-be "fixer" in big Quigley case.
Last Monday when court bells of justice were tollin',
The "fixer" was seen but not stopped in his strollin',
So why lock the barn after horse has been stolen?

CLERGY URGED TO AID RAISING FLORIDA FUNDS

Washington, Sept. 30—Clergymen were urged to help raise funds for relief of Florida's hurricane victims by Worty M. Tippy, an investigator for the Federal Council of Churches in a report to that organization and the American Red Cross.

"Damage wrought by the hurricane is greater than the country generally realizes," said Tippy, adding: "I have just completed a visit throughout the Florida storm area, except Moorehaven. I have seen the quick and splendid work of the Red Cross.

"Let us help Florida quickly and generously."

SPRINGFIELD BOY GETS HOLY CROSS SCHOLARSHIP

Springfield, Sept. 30—Many high officers of the order attended a meeting and reception in Foresters' Home, when the Major John J. Leonard Scholarship of Holy Cross College, Worcester, given by the membership of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, was awarded to John J. Langford of this city.

He recently won the scholarship at Worcester where 7 young men from Boston, Worcester, Springfield and other cities competed.

LORGNETTES DESIGNED FOR ARMY ENGINEERS

Washington, Sept. 30—Lorgnettes will be the fashion as standard equipment for the corps of engineers of the regular army, the War Department states.

The idea is to furnish them a stereoscopic lorgnette, practical rather than ornamental, through which they can quickly read stereoscopic aerial maps, photographs and drawings.

"BOSTON'S BIGGEST, BUSIEST UPSTAIRS EXCLUSIVE FURRIERS"

5-DAY WEEK AIM OF LABOR NOW

Through the Federation's activity the five-day week already has been established in two important trades, printing and fur working, he declared.

IN PRINTING TRADE.

"The week now for the day printing trade is 44 hours, or, five and one half days," Green explained "In most of the night printing trades it is 40 hours, or five days.

"Two months ago we made agreements whereby the fur-working trade has a 40-hour week, or five days, as Ford has now established."

The five-day week will come first in the so-called confining trades, Green said

"It is essential in these trades, where the workers labor at top speed and under continuing and oftentimes unsatisfactory conditions, that the hours should be reduced," he said. "Drudgery means decreased production, which, in turn, is a dead loss to the employer."

With Ford, Green believes increased leisure goes hand in hand with increased production.

"The five-day week is a sound economic principle," said Green. "The employer should bear in mind that it is good business, as Henry Ford said."

Green declared that this was the principle under which the Federation would fight for the shorter week.

U. S. WILL BACK OUT OF COURT

of Nations which passed upon and nullified the American reservations. It was said, no formal statement will be made.

Apparently the committee meeting in Geneva has adjourned after adopting what officials consider a "trick" resolution. While superficially adopting the American reservations the member nations adopted another which would permit them to withdraw their approval at any time.

If the United States accepted this it would be in the position of being in the World Court, while any one nation could withdraw its approval and nullify the terms upon which admission was granted.

The chief obstacle was the fifth American reservation, which the Senate adopted as a protective measure. It provided that the League of Nations, of which the World Court is a branch, could not ask the court for an advisory opinion in a matter in which the United States has or claims to have an interest.

As the situation now stands the American application for membership is still before the international body at Geneva, which has adjourned for several months while the governments act separately on the reservations. The governments then are to report directly to the American Secretary of State on a proposal which the White House already has definitely rejected.

GAS FUEL for HEALTH

What it means to you and your family

UNIFORM heat means uniform health. By maintaining an even, automatically regulated temperature in your home, colds and bronchial troubles will be minimized. Rooms which are too hot and too cold by turns are unhealthy, especially for children. So, Gas Fuel is a health safeguard.

AUTOMATIC GAS HEATING

This system for heating homes and buildings has come into popular favor not alone for its health features, but because it is more convenient, entails far less work and insures comfort whatever the weather conditions.

Another feature of Gas Fuel heating, which applies particularly to the young folks, is that, because there is no coal, dust, dirt, ashes or soot, the basement is kept clean and may be used as a play room. Many other uses are found for a clean basement. Den, work-shop, laundry, game-room—a clean cellar may be attractively fitted up for any of these.

This modern heating system entails no wood-chopping, coal-heaving, ash-toting or other furnace-room drudgery. There is no ash, dirt or soot to be tracked on floors or rugs. Temperature is controlled from above and maintained automatically without attention.

Truly, the use of Gas Fuel for heating your home is well worth your immediate investigation, from whatever angle you figure its desirability

An estimate of installation and operating costs by a Boston Gas Company house-heating engineer entails no cost or obligation on your part. Call, write or phone right now and learn how Gas Fuel may easily be applied to your present piping and radiators. You'll wish to know more of this new home-heating system so widely discussed and which so many home-owners are adopting.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Miss Francesca Braggiotti to Take Part of Salome at Repertory Theatre

A LOVELY AND BEGUILING SALOME, decked out in a succession of marvelous costumes, Miss Francesca Braggiotti as the beauty of Biblical days is to do an entirely original conception when she appears at the Repertory Theatre in "John the Baptist."

HOURS OF RESEARCH through the nearly one thousand historic Salomes of the Public Library was the duty Miss Grace Ripley, designer of the costumes, set for herself and her assistants in the preparing truly beautiful creations for Miss Braggiotte.

MISS RIPLEY VISIONS a Salome of great youthful spirits, a beautiful and innocent tool in the hands of a scheming, tricky mother, a vain, designing creature whose plans brings dire tragedy. Thus will Miss Braggiotte portray the part, and thus is she arrayed.

GIRLISHLY ALLURING and mysteriously veiled the Salome as Miss Ripley first costumes her is wearing a heavy cloak like garment, all white and richly embroidered in intricate stitches, work done by convent hands.

THE SECOND ACT finds Salome in clear white chiffon, beguiling and beautiful, the straight garment showing threads of blood red rubies and flashes of poppy red gleaming in the undergarment as she scatters rose petals over John.

SWATHED IN the seven veils, each of a dynamic color culminating in a brilliant cerise, the dancer before Herod at the banquet discards them one by one to appear gorgeously arrayed in a silver and jewel-studded garment.

HERODIAS, THE MOTHER, Miss Ripley portrays in cerise and sinister reds and in the banquet scene as the peacock, a creature of glorious raiment and countless jewels, making a radiant figure in the ensemble.

ASSYRIAN ROBES for Herod are marvellously embroidered and jeweled, and into the various mantles and garments have been worked priceless pieces of velvets and silks. In all this research and designing Mrs. Myron Bettle and Mrs. Percy Woodward have been diligent assistants.

DEER HILL, the spacious Summer home of the Hugh Bancrofts, set up on a wooded Cohasset hillside, is astir today in honor of the coming out of their daughter, Miss Jessie Bancroft. This young girl makes her debut at a threefold function.

A RECEPTION in the afternoon followed by a dinner for eighty guests, and an evening dance, is the halcyon plan. The receiving line stands in the long drawing room overlooking the walled garden, there is dancing in the music room and a lawn marquis where tea is served.

IN JANUARY, on the 10th of the month, Mr. and Mrs. Bancroft give a dance at the Hotel Somerset for their daughter. A leader in the South Shore's important younger set, Miss Bancroft is also a skilled equestrienne, and has a host of friends.

MISS FRANCESCA BRAGGIOTTI
Boston's favorite society dancer is to do Salome at the Repertory Theatre.

MRS. GEORGE R. R. RIVERS of Newbury street and Miss Mildred Fobes were on the Paris, likewise Henry J. Bowen of Bar Harbor road. The steamship De Grasse on her last crossing this way brought Mrs. Benjamin Kaiser and Miss Mary Kaiser of Marlboro.

A LITTLE DAUGHTER, Ann Willing Morris in the John Boucher Morris family brings grandparent honors to Mr. and Mrs. Edward Page of West Newton. Their daughter, the former Louise Page, is the young mother of the little newcomer who first saw the light of day in faraway Constantinople.

MR. MORRIS IMMEDIATELY after the ceremonial last year sailed with his bride for the Near East where business claimed him and where the Morrises were to divide their time between Constantinople and Smyrna. Mrs. Morris belongs to Boston's smart organizations, the Tuesday Club and the Junior League.

BOTH MR. AND MRS. [redacted] went over to Constantinople in the early spring. Mr. Page has returned to this country but Mrs. Page, who waited on for the interesting event, will be back at their West Newton home sometime next month.

HUNTING APPOINTMENTS for the N[illegible] drag hounds bring that set together tri-weekly for a go at their favorite sport. Next Saturday's meet is slated for the afternoon, at half past three.

THE TUESDAY FOLLOWING it's an early morning meet, a quarter past seven of the clock, hardly more than sun-up, but this smart sporting set is made up of keen riders to hounds, and early morning has no terrors.

POTTERY "KING" WILL VISIT BOSTON SOON

Lovers of old china will be interested in the forthcoming visit to Boston of a direct descendant of one of the old English families of potters—the Copelands, partners of and successors to the Spodes of Stoke-on-Trent, whose history as chinamakers goes back to 1762. The visitor will be Richard Ronald John Copeland—today the head of the great Staffordshire potteries which bear the [illegible] Spode-Copeland name.

HEARST RELIEF TRAIN BACK IN CHICAGO

Chicago, Sept. 30 (Universal)—The relief train sent to hurricane stricken Florida by the Chicago Herald and Examiner and Illinois Central Railroad, has returned to Chicago.

The more than one hundred doctors and nurses, nearing exhaustion, after their trials in and near Miami, were given a rousing welcome as the train pulled into the station.

"We're tired, but we're happy," Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, city health commissioner, who was in charge of the relief train, declared.

The doctors and nurses treated 5,221 cases and gave a total of 14,661 prophylactic treatments.

NEW ENGLAND FOLK SAIL FROM NEW YORK

Among the passengers sailing from New York on the United Fruit Company's steamer Santa Marta for Kingston, Cristobal and Colombian ports were Dr. Neil C. Crawford and Mrs. Franklin B. There's an irresistible lure!

A wholesome lure—a delightful attraction that causes sparkling eyed kiddies to gleefully anticipate the arrival of the Grocer. There's something sestful in the mere mention of Berwick Chocolate Cream Cake that turns to real satisfaction at the first bite of the cake itself.

It had to be so . . . of course; twenty five years of cake making experience . . . the finest ingredients in the cake, plus the tastiest Swiss Chocolate Filling and Frosting imaginable made possible the crowning achievement of Berwick Master Bakers. Popular? . . . well, just ask your Grocer . . . and remember the name—

It's been a wonderful year for action, mates. The beauties paraded at Atlantic City, and Miss America was crowned.

St. Louis won a pennant—proving that anything can happen in baseball.

In Miami they're cleaning up the principal streets by putting houseboats in the water, where they belong.

And so many people swam the English Channel it seemed like they had borrowed the East Boston tunnel.

Today female Channel swimmers are a drug on the market, but there's still a demand for good cooks.

Yep, twice a season is plenty for girl athletes to swim to Dover, but folks demand three good meals a day.

Here's the last paragraph and it's kind of hard to link the English Channel with Berwick Cake. But we'll do our stuff by saying if a package of light, fluffy Berwick was tossed in the Channel, it wouldn't sink—it would float.

ORIGINAL TOUCH IN LETTERS

Greater Movie Season Victors Bare Great Love for Films Revealing New Worlds

The letters on "Why I Like the Movies" written by the winners of the first three awards in the Boston Evening American's recent Greater Movie Season competition are printed today on this page for the information of the thousands who participated in that enjoyable contest.

Although a great percentage of contestants identified the films and players accurately, the required letter, the judges report, appeared to have been taken up in too many instances as an extra something which did not amount to so much. It was the touch of originality in each of these three letters which recommended them to the judges.

HIGH GRADUATE.

Miss Beatrice Spencer, winner of the First Award, is employed a part of each day in the store of her father, a tobacconist at No. 2149 Washington street. The girl is a native of Boston and a graduate of Phillips Brooks School. She also attended Roxbury High.

Clayton and Grace, the children Mrs. Marion L. Upper refers to in her letter, attend the Broad street grammar school in Providence where Mrs. Upper formerly was one of the teachers. Mrs. Upper is of the opinion that the motion picture has not yet been given its place in the American scheme of education.

Mrs. Minnie E. Donovan, winner of the Third Award, believes the moving picture has for many women taken the place of the old family doctor. "I believe thousands of women go to the movies every day", she says, "who otherwise would be trotting around to the doctor. In the playhouse they relax, forget their smaller troubles, laugh, enjoy a 'good cry,' maybe, and go home new women."

CARES ON THE WAY.

Mrs. Donovan is a business college graduate. Her husband is Lieut. William F. Donovan of the Boston Fire Department. They have two children, Eileen, 11, and Billy, 9.

ALADDIN'S LAMP

By BEATRICE R. SPENCER
71 Devon Street, Roxbury
FIRST PRIZE, a Mediterranean tour on the steamship Orca of the Royal Mail line.

PEOPLE have spent thousands of dollars to change from Ugly Ducklings to Cinderellas; it takes thirty cents and a three-hour show to give me a beauty advertisement's sparkle and color.

Millions have been spent on travel, but I sit in a comfortable seat and see a new world each night. And what surer cure can there be for sea-sickness than to never go to sea at all! (Not so good, if I am eligible to a main prize, but mighty true, just the same.)

I shall never be able to afford a Da Vinci, but I have memories of more than one world's masterpiece stored away in my mind.

There was a time when I strained my eyes and ears on the "top shelf" of a playhouse, to witness a performance the public acclaimed marvelous. But those days are gone. Now I see it on the silversheet, a hundredfold more interesting.

As for my bookwormishness, that has vanished into thin air. Why wade through two hundred-odd pages, hesitating over unfamiliar words, when I can see the characters portrayed by my favorite stars, the plot presented so much more understandably?

Daytimes, I'm a spoke in labor's wheel, ugly and stout, with few friends. Night comes . . . I rub Aladdin's lamp, and 'presto!' for three hours

I've the beauty of Cleopatra
The heart of Peter Pan
The education of John Harvard
The acting ability of Duse
The wardrobe of Gloria Swanson
The riches of Midas
And the imagination—ah, there is no limit to its boundaries!

I cannot express myself as I desire to . . . but this much I know . . . my hair may grey, my face may wrinkle, my body may bend and tremble, but as long as there are movies my spirit shall never grow old.

WE GO ADVENTURING

By MARION L. UPPER,
183 Baker Street, Providence.
SECOND PRIZE—Five Hundred Dollars in Gold.

MANY people might wonder why I, a widow with two children, should like motion pictures so very much. Ah! but you see we three have learned to get the very best from them.

How? We have lived them! We have adventured vicariously. We have hunted whales in the Antarctic—we even helped kill Moby Dick. We have traversed great mountains and mighty streams in search of grass, with the Forgotten People. We helped Count Prorok excavate the tragic urns, each of which had contained a sacrificed infant, from the buried city of Carthage. We have visited wild tribes of the South Seas, and are elated at our escape from cannibals. Geography is an open book. We've been everywhere—by land, by sea, by air!

As we settle for the feature picture, each chooses a part and we really feel that we are living these parts throughout the picture. Clayton is the hero, Grace is the heroine, so Mother has to be the old lady, or the villain, or, alas, the comedy relief.

And oh, how earnestly we live these parts. How we weep with the sorrows and laugh with the joys of the screen people. How we urge the hero to hasten to the rescue of the heroine. And when the villain is especially despicable and I have, unluckily, chosen that role Clayton and Grace turn reproachful eyes upon me.

The motion picture has lifted us above the commonplace of our prosaic existence. We know that life is good and trouble fleeting. We live each day to its utmost, the sorrow to be forgotten and the joys to be remembered. The motion picture has pointed us the way—it is but for us to follow.

That is why I like motion pictures.

LEARNING 'ASTRONOMY'

By MINNIE E. DONOVAN,
30 Oakview Terrace, Jamaica Plain.
THIRD PRIZE—Two Hundred Dollars in Gold.

Astronomers study the heavens
And gaze through a lens at the stars;
They know all about the Big Dipper,
They can figure the distance to Mars!

Celestial stars light the darkness;
In the sky how they twinkle and gleam!
But to me the stars are the brightest
That shine on the cinema screen.

They lighten our hearts and our worries
We forget all our troubles and cares;
There's a wonderful course at the Movies—
I study astronomy there!

I AM happier than ever before in my life, because I am a movie fan. Life flows along happily and pleasantly, buoyed up by a fascinating interest which [illegible] me out of the monotony of everyday routine and transports me into the land of dreams and fancies. Never can I be depressed or worried for long, for just around the corner, and within the reach of all, lies that wonderful kingdom of heart [illegible] Movieland.

Who can say I am not rich as any [illegible]? I travel through foreign lands; the world's greatest news events unfold before me, picked artists give their best for my pleasure, and yes, others court death to give me a thrill. I laugh, I cry and go home happy, cheered and completely refreshed.

I am never lonesome for the stars are my circle of friends. They smile out to me, from the silver screen. Knowing them is loving them and following the movies is a most fascinating pleasure as well as a liberal education.

After all, having an "interest" means happiness, and happiness is the elixir which makes life worth living.

Do I like the movies? I love the movies!

400 DEAD AND 2,500 HURT IN FLORIDA

West Palm Beach, Fla., Sept. 30 (A.P.)—Total deaths from the tropical hurricane which swept over the east coast of Florida were 400. There were 2,500 injured, 800 seriously, according to figures announced by Dr. William R. Redden, director of Red Cross medical relief work.

The estimates, said Dr. Redden, were made after careful survey and check of the entire disaster area.

Find Thirty Living in One Hut in Miami

Miami, Fla., Sept. 30 [illegible]—Thirty persons, including [illegible] children were found living in one shack in a tourist camp with only a few cans of food by a committee [illegible]. The committee reported a serious lack of [illegible] in the [illegible] settlements.

The investigators recommended a continuous patrol by militia or police, prompt clean-up measures by sanitation officers and a strict vigil by health officers to prevent disease outbreaks.

Chairman Hancock of the committee declared there is immediate need of food in virtually all the camps and said liquid disinfectants were badly needed. Hundreds of persons in the poor communities need fresh milk, bread and vegetables, phials of iodine should be distributed widely, and provision for sanitary drinking water should be made, according to the committee's report.

TELEPHONES SISTER OF FLORIDA DISASTER

Danvers, Sept. 30.—During a telephone conversation between Mrs. Maurice Frye of Hunt street, and her sister, Miss Pauline Gould, who called her from Miami, Fla., to assure her of her safety, following the recent disaster, Miss Gould said that newspaper reports did not exaggerate conditions there, nor did they fully portray the distress.

Safe in Hurricane

Miami, Fla., Sept. 30.—John P. Whitten, formerly vice-president of the Boston Policemen's Union, now with the Bank of Bay Biscayne, with his family, is among the New Englanders who emerged safely from the recent hurricane.

Six Films Cost Lasky Forces $10,000,000

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—I am getting so I can mention a million dollars without blinking an eye. But even I was somewhat staggered when Jesse Lasky told me that Famous Players-Lasky has $10,000,000 tied up in six of their productions. These pictures, "Old Ironsides," "Beau Geste" "Wings," "Rough Riders," "Sorrows of Satan" and "Ace of Cads," will all be road-shows at the same time.

By road-shows, I mean [illegible] be presented with special premieres for a long run. The Rivoli Theatre which heretofore has specialized in short runs, will change its character when "Old Ironsides" opens there for an indefinite run the middle of November.

Lois Moran

"Sorrows of Satan" opens in New York the middle of October and the other films later in the season.

AFTER MAKING "BEAU GESTE," Herbert Brenon can come pretty near getting anything he wants from Famous Players-Lasky. He asked for "Sorrel and Son," which is to be one of Famous Players-Lasky's most pretentious pictures for 1927, and his request was granted as quickly as it was made.

Beyond Lois Moran, as the girl, no selection has been made for a cast. This is one of the most widely read books of the season, and I find here in New York not to have read this book is to admit an unforgivable ignorance.

I SUPPOSE NOW THAT NICHOLAS SCHENCK of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is traveling westward the old rumor of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer combining with United Artists will be revived.

Last time Mr. Schenck was in California there was much talk that he alone could persuade Charlie Chaplin to agree to this consolidation. At that time nothing came of it.

Nicholas Schenck, like his brother Joseph, is not only a good business man, but a born diplomat. I would be willing to send either of the Schenck brothers abroad on the most delicate diplomatic mission and be sure it would be handled satisfactorily.

BUSTER COLLIER, who is developing into quite a man about town in New York, if one is to judge of his popularity in theatrical circles, is about to make a picture for Robert Kane.

Glenn Hunter had already been slated for the male lead in "Song of the Dragon," which Robert Kane is making here in the East, but Hunter's stage plans made it impossible for him to get away and I learn Buster Collier was given the part.

"TURKISH DELIGHT," the scenario that took the rotund Irving Cobb to Hollywood, goes into production the middle of October.

I hear from an inside source that the DeMille company is delighted with Mr. Cobb's maiden screen effort.

They must think pretty well of it since they are handing it to Paul Sloan, one of their best directors.

IT WAS NO IDLE JEST on the part of Hal Roach when he told me that he planned to make elaborate comedies. Yesterday one of my friends on the West Coast sent me word that he had signed Matt Moore to play the lead in a mystery comedy.

I am sure Mr. Roach has no intention of imitating "You'd be Surprised," and it is probably only a coincidence that his mystery tale also deals with a jewel robbery and a scandal.

More and more of our important actors are going in for comedy, and why not when the whole world seems bent on this type of picture? It is better, isn't it, than the sex plays that are flooding the stage?

Quick Quizzes on the Movies

By BARBARA BENTON

H. C. H., READING—Delighted to have you among my "list of brain teasers"—as you call them. Call early and often. "Youth For Sale" was released in 1925 by the American Feature Film Company. The principal players were May Allison, Sigrid Holmquist, Richard Bennett and Charles Emmett Mack. The production is not being shown anywhere in this territory. You might say that it has been "played out."

B. R. D., MEDFORD—No indeed, I "don't mind." Except when you ask me that one about the "mol [illegible]." All queries on movie contests are out. The name Lois is pronounced with two syllables quickly ended, as "Low-ees," with accent on the first. Outside of the movie publications on the newsstands there are various trade publications such as The Film Daily, 1650 Broadway, New York, but I think you will find the newsstand magazines far more interesting reading—from the fan point of view.

E. L. W., MEDFORD—Never mind the Miss or the Mrs.—just Barbara. Max Davidson is in the supporting cast of "Hotel Imperial" with Pola Negri at Famous Players Coast Studio. Try Vera Gordon and George Sidney at First National.

F. E. T., BOSTON—Syd Chaplin will be seen soon in "The Better 'Ole" and after that in "The Missing Link." Rin Tin Tin in "While London Sleeps." Where, do you suppose, are the great open spaces in this one.

B. D. M., BOSTON—Tom Meighan's next is "The Canadian" with Charles Winninger, whom you saw here last year in "No, No, Nanette." Adolph Menjou will make "An Angel Passes." After that, "The Last Of Mrs. Cheyney."

M. T. B., MELROSE—Tom Mix leading lady? He has none that is no regular one. Like Doug Fairbanks, he has been selecting new "help" all along. Dorothy Dwan is the only one who has been scheduled to play in two consecutive pictures with him. But they are both yet to be released, "The Great K and A Train Robbery" and "Canyon of Light."

A Boston Story With a Charming Girl Heroine

Rosemary Merton, youngest daughter in a large Roxbury family, rebels at her poor surroundings and dreams of romance and luxury. She is attending college, but lack of money prevents her from taking part in college social activities. Philip Eames, a young man who has been in Japan, comes home and Rosemary welcomes him happily. She imagines he is in love with her, but is speedily disillusioned. She quits college and gets a job in a fashionable bookstore through a friend, Nina Clark. Nina takes Rosemary up the back stairs in the building to a studio occupied by a group of artists. They call it the Secret Studio

CHAPTER XVI

THEY were stirring now, beginning to say good-by in little groups. Rosemary jumped to her feet. It must be very late.

"Come, Rosemary, I'll take you home," Larry was coaxing.

Home? Could she stay with Nina?

"But it's so late. I think I'd better ask Nina if I can stay over with her."

Larry shook his head, smiling. "You can't stay at Nina's."

"Why can't I stay at Nina's?" asked Rosemary wonderingly of Larry.

"Because — well — you can't. Nina's one of those hermit crabs who prefers to be alone. Aren't you Nina?"

"Aren't I what?" asked Nina. She came in with Rankin, hat in hand, to say goodnight.

"I said you were a hermit crab and didn't have room for Rosemary."

"I didn't have room for Rosemary — what's the idea?"

"Well, I'm offering to see Rosemary home, and she says—"

"But you're going to stay with Ellen, Rosemary. We've got it all arranged. You can all walk home together. Hal's the official escort."

"Foiled!" hissed Larry, pulling imaginary whiskers. "Foiled! But in that case I'll get along home, if Rosemary can go with Ellen and Hal. I gotta get an early start in the morning. Tennis. Some other time, huh, Rosemary?"

Rosemary said good-bye reluctantly. She was sorry to leave Larry. He might have walked to Ellen's

FIRE SHOTS AT POLICE OFFICER

An attempt to murder Patrolman Walter Fennelly as he "pulled" a signal box in Fulton street, Medford, was made today, a revolver bullet missing him by inches.

Fennelly was standing at the signal box, a short distance from the high board fence which surrounds the Medford High School athletic field, when there was the sound of a revolver shot and a bullet sped past his head.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Johnson, of Salem street, and Tony Saville, of Fulton street, told the officer that they saw the barrel of a revolver sticking through a knothole in the fence.

Scaling the high fence, Patrolman Fennelly made a futile attempt to find his assailant.

The policeman was unable to explain the mystery shooting. He informed his superiors that he knew of no person who felt any animosity toward him.

The gunman evidently was lying on the ground inside the athletic field. Witnesses stated that the barrel of the revolver was pointed upward.

$27,000 WILLED TO CHARITY

The will of Mrs. Elizabeth L. Walker, formerly of Brookline, filed in Dedham today, revealed $60,000 public and private bequests.

Among charitable institutions remembered are Massachusetts Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, $5,000; Boston Tuberculosis Society, $5,000; Collis T. Huntington Hospital, for the cancer fund, $5,000, and Brookline Friendly Society, Animal Rescue League, Boston Floating Hospital, Home of the Good Samaritan and Boston Tuberculosis Association, each $2,000. Another sum of $2,000 is left to the Monday Club of Malden, to be used as long as that association remains active.

W. A. GOVE COMPANY MAY MAKE AN OFFER

The stock brokerage firm of W. A. Gove Company, No. 50 Congress street, suspended from operating on the Stock Exchange yesterday and later in the day petitioned into bankruptcy, has under consideration a composition offer to its creditors, according to a statement made today by Attorney Edward H. Ginsberg.

Ginsberg computed the liabilities of his clients at $50,000 and the assets as of uncertain amount.

168 NEW SPUR TRACKS FOR N. E. INDUSTRIES

The addition of 168 spur tracks, totalling 105,282 feet, marks in a small way the general increase in industries in New England during the year 1925, a report issued by the Bureau of Commercial and Industrial Surveys of the Boston Chamber of Commerce shows.

THIEF BARES RUM CACHE TO POLICE

Fitchburg, Sept. 30.—Patrolman Alfred Coucure, while patrolling his route on Fairmount street early today, discovered a man jumping from a window of the Cleghorn Athletic Club.

The building is owned by Mayor Joseph H. Deahey.

The officer commanded the man to halt, but this caused him to put on more speed and make his escape through neighboring backyards.

When a thorough search failed to discover the burglar Patrolman Coucure notified police headquarters and returned to the scene to investigate the break.

A hasty examination of the premises showed that the burglar had broken a slot machine in the club rooms and escaped with several dollars in silver pieces. Following this discovery the officer continued to search through the building and within a short time his efforts were rewarded by glance at more than 60 gallons of Scotch whiskey, carefully placed in a private room.

The officer notified headquarters of his find and Inspector Flint and Liquor Officer Walter Grant were sent to the scene to conduct a thorough search of the premises. A complete search revealed 60 gallons of Scotch whiskey, 65 gallons of alcohol, 12 cases of beer, 40 barrels of mash, two slot machines, two stills and considerable apparatus used in the modern liquor business.

ANOTHER TUNNEY IS ON THE HERO LIST

Hoboken, N. J., Sept. 30 (I.N.S.)—Gene, the heavyweight champ, isn't the only hero in the Tunney family.

A. W. Esleeck Dead

Greenfield, Sept. 30 (A.P.).—Augustine W. Esleeck, president of the Esleeck Manufacturing Company of Turners Falls, died today. He came from Brunswick, Ga., to Holyoke in 1871.

BIG SLASH DUE IN PRICE OF GASOLINE

With independent distributors selling gasoline at 15 and 16 cents a gallon, a general reduction in prices by the large gasoline concerns was forecast with the coming of the Winter months.

Throughout New England motorists are finding varying prices at different filling stations. In Greater Boston the price per gallon runs from 15 cents to the standard price of 21 cents.

In Maine, where there is a three cent gasoline tax, the charge is 27 cents.

The usual slashing of prices during the Summer months was missing this year and with the output of crude oil and gasoline steadily mounting it was believed that the larger concerns would find it necessary to cut prices inasmuch as the demand is declining with the passing of warm weather.

DEFENSE OPENS IN DAUGHERTY BRIBE CASE

New York, Sept. 30 (I.N.S.).—Defence counsel in the conspiracy trial of Harry M. Daugherty, former Attorney-General, and Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian, today waived the opening address to Judge Julian Mack in Federal Court as they plunged into their evidence.

The defence promptly summoned George E. Williams, managing director of the alien property custodian's office under Miller in 1921 to the stand. Williams, about whom much of the government's case has been woven, is regarded as the star witness for the defence.

Williams testified that he had never seen Harry M. Daugherty in his life before today. He also declared that he did not know the late Jesse Smith, Daugherty's friend.

Williams said he did not recollect any conversation with Merton on April 6, 1921, concerning the Societe Suisse claim for $7,000,000 in assets of the American Metals Company seized during the war. He did recall, the witness testified, a conversation with Merton in July, 1921.

"I asked him at that time," Williams said, "because we were not familiar with the Swiss law, to procure for us a legal opinion from a Swiss authority on the oral transfer of the stock in 1917 on which the Societe Suisse based its claim."

The witness interpreted the trading with the enemy act passed Oct. 6, 1917. He defined the word "enemy" under the statute, declaring that a German here during the war was not an enemy if he did not come under one of the provisions of the act.

Prior to turning the case over to the defence, Judge Mack announced that the conversation between Williams and Merton would be permitted to go to the jury as given by Merton in testimony.

The conversation related to Merton's efforts to obtain from Williams information as to how to go about recovering the property.

BOSTON, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1926

N. E. TRADE NEARING BOOM

Death Takes 'Forty-Niner' at 97

PROSPERITY FEVER HITS HUB AREA

Business conditions in New England have improved since Summer, and the current rate of industrial activity is almost equal to the average maintained during the last few years.

The New England Business Activity Index for August was higher than July, but below that for August last year, says the monthly review of industrial and financial conditions in New England, made public today by the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston. The review is compiled by Frederic H. Curtiss, chairman and Federal Reserve agent.

New England cotton mills consumed more cotton during August than in July, the first month in which an increase has been reported since last March. The rate of activity, however, is still less than a year ago.

SHOE OUTPUT LARGER.

Activity in the New England woolen mills has been improving since May, and operations have been on a higher scale than either one or two years ago.

Shoe factories have increased their scale of operations since spring in anticipation of the usual heavy seasonal shipments, and current output is slightly larger than a year ago. There was an improvement in the paper industry of this district during midsummer, but it was not sustained in the past few weeks.

Conditions in the metal trades are rather irregular, with a tendency toward improvement in the Connecticut factories, but a decline in Massachusetts. The number of workers employed in 984 representative factories in Massachusetts increased to a marked degree in August, following an even sharper decline in July.

WORKERS EARN MORE.

The percentage of workers on full time schedules increased, and is practically equal to the proportion on full time in August last year.

The amount of earnings of workers also increased in August. When a comparison is made with conditions last winter, however, the number employed and total earnings are both lower than they were at that time.

The value of contracts awarded for new construction in New England during August was larger than in any previous month this year, with the exception of May, but was somewhat less than in August last year.

Distribution of merchandise through New England retail stores has been unusually large in the past two months for the season of the year. Sales during August were the largest on record for the month, with one exception.

MONEY RATES FIRM.

Sales of the Boston department stores during each week, beginning with the last week in July and continuing through the third week in September, the latest period for which data are available, were larger than in the corresponding weeks a year ago.

Commodity prices held fairly firm during the latter part of August and September following a decline which has lasted, with minor interruptions, for approximately a year.

Mother Kills Two and Self

Utica, N. Y., Sept. 30 (A.P.).—Mrs. Edna Bednars drowned herself and her two children, aged seventeen months and six years, after a quarrel with her husband.

DANGER'S THRILL LURES HIM TO DROP

GOLD RUSH VETERAN IS DEAD

Manchester, Sept. 30 (A.P.).—John Rogers Allen, who left this little New England coast town in the 1849 rush to the California gold fields and who returned, and lived to be the town's oldest resident, died today.

He was 97 years old and was the last of Manchester's "Forty-niners."

Allen sailed in 1849, with 39 others, on a voyage around Cape Horn to San Francisco. The trip consumed seven [illegible] and they were four days in circling the Horn.

He spent four years in the diggings and then returned with some gold, but not wealthy. The return was made by ship to the Isthmus of Panama.

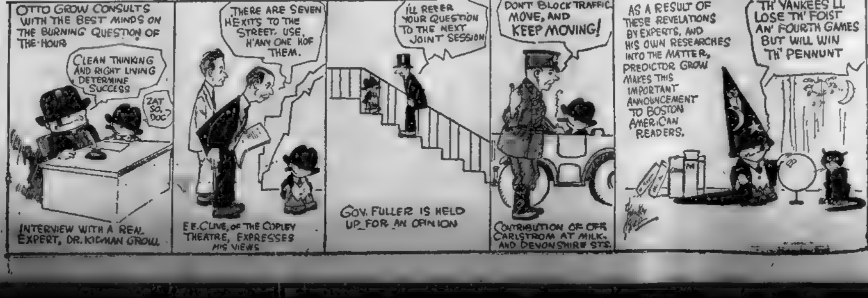

In a party of 300 he traveled by muleback across the isthmus and took passage for New York. The entire trip from San Francisco to New York was accomplished in 22 days and 8 hours, which was then a new record.

He told how he became ill with rheumatism from standing in the water in the gold diggings and spent nearly all of the $2,500 in gold he had dug, for doctors' services at $16 a visit. Then, being by trade a carpenter, he began sawing out timber and making rockers and wheelbarrows for miners, earning more in that way than he could at mining.

After he returned to Manchester he operated for four years what was said to be the first machine invented and operated in the United States for sawing out veneer. He became a general contractor later.

Until his wife died last May he retained his faculties and health and often told stories of the gold rush period.

IN RADIO SHOW TALENT QUEST FINALS

SINGS TONIGHT
Edward McHugh, No. 1028 Commonwealth Ave., winner in Talent Quest preliminary, to appear at Radio Show this evening. He is a baritone.

AT RADIO SHOW
Mrs. Lillian Gainer, soprano, No. 125 Jeannette Ave., Belmont, takes part in tonight's final Radio Talent Quest Competition.

REACHES FINALS
John Lopez, tenor, No. 3563 Washington St., West Roxbury, competes for honors in the Talent Quest finals at the Radio Show.

QUEST WINNERS PICKED TONIGHT

A wealth of fine voices, instrumental numbers of exceptional excellence, sixteen in number, all of which have drawn enthusiastic applause from crowded houses at Loew's State Theatre and the throngs at the Radio Show during the preliminaries and semi-finals, provide the novel program.

For two weeks the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser, in co-operation with the Radio Exposition and Loew's State Theatre, sponsored the Talent Quest in search for these sixteen entertainers.

Nearly 1,200 entered and after all passed the scrutiny of preliminary and semi-final judges the sixteen best are left for tonight's finals.

The fourteen selected already this week are Miss Frances Kelly of South Boston, soprano; John King of Jamaica Plain, tenor; Lillian Gaines of Belmont; Vera F. Keane of Roxbury; Hildred W. Polley of Medford, Manola E. Simpson of Roxbury, William Paul McCarthy of Lowell; Katherine Follet Mann of Wollaston; Timothy O'Callaghan of West Newton; Harold Patrick of Jamaica Plain; Edward McHugh of Allston; Anita Bancroft of Back Bay; Marguerite Barr of Malden and J. T. Lopez of Back Bay.

Mr. Joseph H. Brennan, manager of Loew's State Theatre, is chairman of the judges which include the masters of jazz, Vincent Lopez and Philip Spitalny and a representative of the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser. Mr. Sheldon Fairbanks, manager of the Radio Show, is honorary chairman of the judges.

The judges will choose nine of the final sixteen aspirants and make the following awards—a ten weeks' vaudeville engagement for two on Loew's Circuit at $150 a week; a 60 Chrysler coupe, latest model, donated by the C. E. Fay Company, No. 730 Commonwealth avenue; a Stewart Warner console radio; an Atwater-Kent radio; a Chelsea radio, a Spartan radio, a Sonochorde loud speaker and a Balkite power equipment complete.

H. & D. PLAYERS ON RADIO

Radio fans will have the opportunity Friday at 4 o'clock at Mechanics Hall to witness the production of a radio play when the Houghton and Dutton Company players will stage one of their famous Benton Family playlets.

"Mr. Benton Catches a Burglar" is the title of the playlet. It will be broadcast from the Houghton and Dutton Company Broadcasting Studio of WEEI on the great stage at Mechanics Hall in full view of the audience.

The many radio fans who have come to love the voice and droll sayings of the middle aged Mr. Benton, will enjoy seeing him as impersonated by Harry B. Lowe, the Assistant Superintendent of the Houghton & Dutton Company Store.

McHUGH TO SING.

The calm "Mrs. Benton" who never loses her patience with their irrepressible son, Jack, or with her daughter Alice's lively college friends, is played by Anne Bradford, whose voice is heard every morning in talks to home-makers.

Jack, the eleven year-old boy will be seen with his "boyish cut," his eager face and in a natty trouser suit. At other times he may be seen as Alice Brown, a most attractive young girl, busy with secrotarial duties in an office in the big department store.

Edward McHugh, the baritone of the Houghton & Dutton Co. family, will be heard as a radio singer

TO READ LETTERS.

"Bill" Kelcourse, without whom no minstrel show can be given by the Houghton & Dutton Company's employes, will be chief "noise-maker"—a very important personage in a radio play, as sounds coming at just the right time have to be depended upon to help carry the thought when nothing can be seen.

Anne Bradford, author of the Benton family plays, found it is so difficult to find plays on the market suited for broadcasting, that she turned to writing them herself, under the name of Josephine Perkins.

Naturally a radio play is presented in a very different way than on noise maker, for example, will be the legitimate stage. The chief seen in full action, like the "property man" on the Chinese stage.

The players feel amply repaid for all the work they put into these playets when they read the letters from listeners who live in lonely places, or who have been shut in for years, or who are blind and never expected to enjoy a play again.

Radio puts the home in tune

Don't fail to attend the Boston Radio Exposition this week.

THE old folks like Radio because its sweet, familiar strains awake fond memories of other days—filling hungry hearts with romance—each evening an adventure in restful contentment.

Every home, however small, should have a Radio to dispense the world's sunshine. Sons and daughters can provide parents with no greater happiness during lonesome hours than the gift of Radio.

Whether father prefers a set completely installed or to build his own from standard, workable parts, he will find real values and the latest types of equipment described in detail on the daily Radio page of the Boston American and Boston Advertiser.

Hotels, Resorts and Travel

NEW SHIPS FOR HALIFAX RUN

So popular has Nova Scotia become as a Summer vacation country that the Eastern Steamship Lines are building two new vessels especially for that service.

These new steamships will be named Yarmouth and Evangeline. They are to be placed in service early in the Summer of 1927. One will sail between Boston and Yarmouth under the flag of the Boston and Yarmouth SS Company of the Eastern Steamship Lines.

The other will establish a new Eastern Steamship Lines service, of two round trips per week, between New York and Yarmouth, connecting with special Yarmouth-Halifax passenger trains to achieve a thorough schedule of 33 hours, between New York and Halifax, N. S.

The Evangeline and Yarmouth will have six decks, the upper three of which will be devoted entirely to passenger accommodations.

Every modern device has been incorporated in the construction and equipment of these ships to provide for the safety and comfort of the passengers. A speed of 18 knots will be maintained in actual service but the ships can do better, if necessary.

MAYOR LOOKS OVER STREET WIDENING JOBS

Mayor Nichols toured the city with members of the planning board to survey the places involved in several street improvements contemplated by the board.

These projects included the widening of Dorchester avenue to connect with the Old Colony boulevard, now under construction by the State; the widening of Preble street and of Andrews square at Dorchester avenue, and also at Southampton street; the making of a new thoroughfare in Boston to connect the northern artery with intersecting streets in the North End; the widening of Thompson square, and a widening at Sullivan square.

SENTENCE PORTLAND MAN ON DRIVING CHARGE

Portland, Me., Sept. 30.—For operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor, Joseph, or James F. Manning of this city was sentenced in the Suprior Court to seven months in the county jail.

Appealing from a fine of $200 and two months in jail imposed in the South Portland Municipal Court, Manning was about to be tried, when he retracted his plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty.

FLORIDA STORM PERIOD OVER

If the unfortunate and disastrous hurricane which recently devastated the lower east coast of Florida has given you concern as to whether or not to spend the Winter in Florida, the following will be of interest to you.

From information given us by the Florida State Chamber of Commerce, covering a period of 39 years, there have been no tropical cyclones during the months of January, February, March and April.

During this same period, there has been but one in May, and two in December.

It, therefore, seems quite reasonable to assume that there is very little possibility of such an occurrence during the months named above this year or any other year.

WILL RESUME CRUISES SOUTH

Announcement is made by the United Fruit Company that the Costa Rican Colombian and Guatemalian cruises which are so popular will be resumed.

The first Costa Rican cruise will start from New York January 1, and each Saturday thereafter up to and including March 19. This is an all expense cruise of 22 days covering approximately 4,767 nautical miles at the low rate of $350.

The first Colombian cruise will start January 5 and each Wednesday thereafter—an all expense cruise of 22 days covering approximately 4,774 nautical miles at a minimum rate of $315.

The first Guatemalian all-expense cruise of 24 days at rate of $315, leaves New York, January 8, and every other Saturday thereafter.

Further information will be furnished upon receipt of request addressed to Hotel and Travel Bureau, Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser, No. 93 Summer street, Boston.

AVENGER AIMED BLOW TO KILL

Oak Bluffs Sept. 30—Admitting that she meant to kill when she struck Antone Madeiros on the head with a wrench in the courtroom after he was convicted of slaying her husband, Mrs. Christine Kakalesoris was given a suspended sentence of one year in jail.

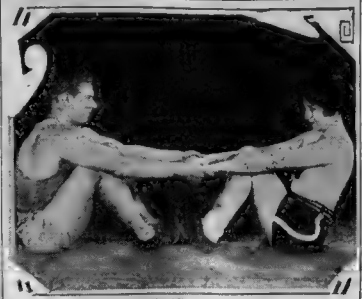

Madeiros had received a two-year sentence for the slaying when Mrs. Kakalesoris, unsatisfied with his punishment, attacked him and knocked him unconscious.

B. & M. TO USE OLD ROAD

Work of diverting the Boston end of the Lexington branch to the Fitchburg division of the Boston & Maine Railroad has begun. Years ago Lexington trains came into Boston over the old Fitchburg railroad, but were diverted when the right of way from Lake street, Arlington, to West Cambridge was abandoned. Now the old right-of-way will be used.

A RUNNER'S TRAINING

Charlie Paddock, track star, shows his fiancee, Bebe Daniels of the movies, how to strengthen leg muscles.

FIANCE DRILLS BEBE DANIELS

It's simply Charlie Paddock, "world's fastest human," and now fascinating Bebe Daniels' fiance, giving Bebe a few pointers on the art of making time.

This is a muscle developing exercise, all Charlie's own, which the international sprint champion believes will make anyone break records. With the feet firm against one another and the hands locked, the trick is to raise each other up simultaneously. When you can do this twenty-five times a minute, you're getting along fine. Then, after keeping it up ten minutes, go out and jog about the track—if you can! It looks so simple, but oh my!

Charlie, who holds thirty-seven world's records, has been doing this for some time. The exercise, he says, has developed his leg muscles more than anything else, and judging from the appearance of his steel spring legs, it must be efficacious, to say the least. Charlie is making his screen debut in "The Campus Flirt," which comes to the Metropolitan this week. In the picture, which is Bebe's new collegiate comedy, he has the singular distinction of portraying himself, "Charles Paddock, track coach."

Bebe, among other things, runs the last two laps of the relay race in the track meet sequence of "The Campus Flirt." Not only that, but she runs in surprisingly good form, thanks to the able advice of Mr. Paddock.

Young Kahn Plans Night Club With Mirror Floor

New York, Sept. 30 (A.P.)—Roger Wolff Kahn, nineteen, son of Otto Kahn, the banker, plans to open a night club on Broadway with a mirror for a dance floor.

The club will be known as Le Perroquet de Paris: It will have tables with glass tops and bodies in the form of bowls in which will be gold fish.

EXCURSION TO CAPITAL WILL LEAVE SATURDAY

The New York, New Haven & Hartford road will operate an excursion from Boston to Washington October 2, returning October 3, at rate of $10 for the round trip.

There will be a limited number of tickets sold, so that you are sure of making the trip with reasonable comfort.

This trip will give you 11 hours in Washington—plenty of time to visit the White House and other national shrines.

"We know where Waldorf foods come from!"

"Our buyers go right to the source of supply. Apples, for instance, for use in Waldorf Apple Pie are selected at the orchards. Thus we know that their quality will be the best.

"Every purchase of food must measure up to the Waldorf standard of goodness. It is inspected by experts before we buy it, again when received at our commissary, and still again at the Waldorf before it is served to you.

"The food you eat at Waldorf must be fresh, pure and of the finest quality. Quality must be the best at Waldorf!"

From A "somewhat Unusual HOUSEWIFE"

"I HAVE just heard from Mr. B——", a magazine editor writes us, "that Mrs. B——, who is a somewhat unusual housewife, said that if it were possible for her to get this bread all the time she would never make any more bread. When I tell you that her family is especially fond of home-made bread you will see that her recommendation is very much worth while."

FROM women everywhere they are coming—enthusiastic comments on White Rose Bread! From "unusual housewives" who still bake in their own kitchens—from discriminating home-keepers who select every food they serve with intelligent care.

It is not surprising that these women should find this new loaf different—more nearly like the finest home-made bread in every way.

For White Rose Bread was perfected with the help of some of the leading food authorities in the country. Authorities who have made a life-long study of home-cooking and nutrition—who are constantly advising thousands of other women on these subjects.

These experts had one desire—to give to women a loaf as nearly perfect as it is possible to make it.

Try White Rose Bread today. Notice the difference yourself. Notice the firm, even grain—its texture, almost like cake texture—its delicious bread flavor. See whether you, too, do not prefer this loaf to any you have ever served.

White Rose Bread is baked not once but twice a day, and rushed to your grocer to be always fresh for you. Massachusetts Baking Company.

BUTLER BACKS NEW FEDERAL BUILDING

By FRANK H. MELOON, Financial Editor.

Commenting on my recent plea for a new Federal building on the present site in Boston and early action thereon, U. S. Senator William M. Butler tells me: "I am convinced that the present building has outlived its usefulness and should be replaced. I believe that the present site is an admirable one, and that the new building when authorized, should be erected there. The lower floors should be devoted to Post office purposes, and the upper floors to other Federal activities.

Senator Butler

"As far as possible, I believe the structure should be of the office building type to assure economy of space and operation, but I would not have this interfere with an architectural plan in keeping with the surroundings."

Department Commander William McGinnis will head the American Legion delegation leaving Massachusetts for the annual convention in Philadelphia, Oct. 12. The delegation will take with them a three foot replica of Bunker Hill Monument to adorn the dining table. It might also, with permission of Henry Ford, Sudbury realty magnate, take along the stage coach in which Daniel Webster rode to deliver his famous oration at Bunker Hill's dedication. Mr. Ford bought the stage coach some weeks ago.

Is the Boston Chamber of Commerce Building soon to become known as an annex of the Boston Stock Exchange? Already five stock exchange houses are within its Federal street walls. They are Paul Johnson & Co., Aden J. Kerle & Co., A. L. Albee & Co., Thomas F. Gagen and Louis P. Mott & Co.

President Perry Woodward of Waldorf System, Inc., says: "By way of a special report to the preferred and common stockholders to accompany the thirteenth consecutive quarterly dividend paid by the corporation, the directors advise that all of the outstanding first preferred shares of stock have been called for redemption on October 1, 1926. In brief, a period of 7½ years has seen the retirement of $900,000 of 8 per cent. preferred stock notwithstanding substantial dividend disbursements to the common stockholders, and makes the stock outstanding of two classes, preferred and common, instead of three classes, first preferred, preferred and common. The sinking fund payments which applied to the first preferred stock averaged in the last five years over $100,000 a year. With no first preferred stock outstanding, future sinking fund payments apply to the preferred stock issue, of which at this time there are outstanding $468,100 par value. Of common stock there are 441,410 shares outstanding.

"While the directors intend to pursue a sound policy in the matter of dividends, with the prosperity of the corporation continuing and less and less preferred stock to have priority, more funds become available for distribution as common dividends. The directors believe that the stockholders would do well to bear these facts in mind in sizing up the value of their security, as it may not be for the interest of the fluctuation. Each stockholder, however, must be his own judge."

RAIL EARNING FIGURES SET NEW PEAKS

For the third time this year, Class I carriers report earnings on estimated rate-making valuation of over 6 per cent. August earnings establishing a record for that month in gross and net. August figures were also highest so far this year.

The first 73 carriers report total August net operating income of $122,248,363, against $115,315,952 in August, 1925, an increase of $7,932,401 or 6.9 per cent. In July these roads had net of $110,049,948. August showing an increase of $12,163,415 or 11.9 per cent.

On basis of roads so far reporting, aggregate August net for all Class I carriers should approximate $133,000,000, against $124,805,665 in August of 1925 and $116,635,311 in July this year. Such a result would represent August earnings at annual seasonal rate of 6.32 per cent on rate making valuation taken at $21,175,000,000 at close of 1925 against 6.15 per cent. in August, 1925, on valuation of $20,500,000,000 at close of 1924 and rate of 6.34 per cent, in July, this year.

Gross of reporting roads was $527,607,519, against $519,067,638 a year ago, an increase of $18,539,881 or 3.6 per cent. In July last their gross totaled $514,992,074. August showing an increase of 4.6 per cent.

On basis of net for August as estimated above, eight months' net will approximate $744,900,000, at annual rate of 5.81 per cent. on valuation, against $661,971,206 or annual rate of 5.17 per cent. in same period of 1925.

BANKER STRAUSS SAILS FOR A VISIT TO JAPAN

New York, Sept. 30 (A.P.).—Lewis T. Strauss, representing Kuhn, Loeb & Co., bankers for the Japanese government during the Russo-Japanese war when the firm issued about $200,000,000 of Japanese bonds, sails today from Vancouver, B. C., on a courtesy visit to Japan. The bankers are understood to have maintained intimate relations with the Japanese government since that time. Mr. Strauss, who was private secretary to Herbert Hoover, United States food administrator in Belgium during the World War, is the first member of the banking firm to visit Japan since 1907, when the late Jacob H. Schiff, senior partner, did.

New York Curb

New York, Sept. 30.—Strength and activity in the amusement issues featured the Curb market today. Warner Brothers sold 3¾ points higher at 53, while a block of 1,000 shares of Victor Talking Machine sold at a new high for the year of 105. Public Utility and oil stocks were fractionally lower with electric investors at 41⅝; public service of New Jersey new when issued at 32½ and Humble Oil at 58¾.

For Dorchester Bay

Deepening and improving of Dorchester Bay is a worth-while project. It commands the attention of many leaders in fields of Boston business and finance.

Preliminary survey by the War Department has been recently completed. This followed a hearing on the need of deepening and improving the bay, conducted by Manager Frank S. Davis of the Maritime Department of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

A 30-foot channel through the bay is proposed.

Soundings were taken from the main ship channel through Dorchester Bay to the Neponset bridge. No ledge formation or rocks are in the line of the channel that would interfere or retard the proposed improvement. Borings were made to a depth of 30 feet for a distance of nearly four miles. The bottom was found to be mud and clay.

It is to be hoped the channel will be started and completed with more speed than usually attends worthy projects that have to wait upon Congressional delay and deliberation.

LLOYDS BANK OFFICERS ARE IN BOSTON

J. W. Beaumont Pease, Chairman of the Directors of Lloyds Bank Limited, London, England, and F. A. Beane, General Manager of Lloyds Bank Limited, London, England, are in Boston today as guests of the National Shawmut Bank.

In conjunction with its affiliated institutions, Lloyds Bank controls the largest volume of banking resources of any bank in the world, and apart from its subsidiaries it ranks as the second largest bank in the world.

It has a subscribed capital of £73,302,076 Sterling, paid-up capital of £15,810,252 Sterling, with a surplus fund of £10,000,000, making its paid-up capital the largest of any bank in the world.

Its origin dates back to the year 1765, although the greater part of its growth lies with the present century. Its deposits in 1900 were £51,000,000, are at present in excess of £330,000,000, with total resources of £380,000,000.

Besides its 1700 branches in the British Isles, through its subsidiaries it has numerous offices in France, Belgium and Switzerland, also in South America, West Africa, Egypt, India and Burmah.

NEW BUILDING IS IN LARGE VOLUME

New York, Sept. 30.—Volume of contract letting and work soon calling for bids continue well ahead of the corresponding period in 1925, and this with the year three-quarters gone.

Money value of engineering construction awarded in the United States since the first of the year reached a total of $2,178,325,000, as against $1,854,680,000 in the same period last year, Engineering News Record reports. In the total for this year $1,325,685,000 went into private operations, and $852,640,000 into public jobs, including road construction.

Engineering construction contracts let throughout the country in the past week were valued at $68,311,000, which compares with $51,483,000 in the preceding week and $48,852,000 in the corresponding week a year ago.

Minimum costs observed are $150,000 for commercial, educational, residential and other buildings, $40,000 for industrial projects and $15,000 for waterworks, excavations and other public works.

Despite the substantial gain in operations, the cost level for the entire country is only 2 per cent. higher than at this time last year.

Structural steel shipments reached exactly the same tonnage as the sales, which were the heaviest for any single month since October, 1925. Shipments of fabricated structurals, January 1 to September 1, were 3 per cent. ahead of the corresponding period in 1925.

Virginia Wilson Lifts Glenna Collett's Golf Title

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

Vanguard of Series Fans Hits Gotham

COLLETT IS DEFEATED AT GOLF

Woman Champion Is Upset by Miss Virginia Wilson by 2 and 1

Marion Country Club, Haverford, Pa., Sept. 30—Another champion suffered the fate that has been following title holders during 1926 when Miss Collett, women's golf queen, was defeated by Miss Virginia Wilson of Chicago here today by a score of 2 and 1.

The cards follow:

Miss Wilson—
Out . . . . 5 7 4 6 5 5 5 5 3—45
Miss Collett—
Out . . . . 5 6 4 6 5 5 5 4—45
Miss Wilson—
In 5 5 4 3 5 5 5 4
Miss Collett—
In 4 6 4 3 5 6 6 4

EX-CHAMP TAKES LEAD.

The opening drive of Glenna Collett, defending champion, sent up a shower of water as it struck the fairway, 220 yards from the tee.

Although she was bunkered on her approach, Miss Wilson recovered magnificently at the first to halve the hole in fives, the champion missing a short putt for her win.

Miss Collett became one up at the second, when the Chicago girl took three putts on the green for a 7 after overplaying her approach. The next two holes were halved, each taking three putts at the 150-yard third and getting down in par sixes at the fourth.

Miss Collett missed another short putt for a win at the fifth which was halved in fives. Both also got down in par figures at the sixth and seventh.

The 350-yard eighth was badly played. Miss Wilson driving into a trap and Miss Collett pitching over the green on her approach. On with their thirds each took three putts to get down, the Litchfield girl losing a short putt by inches for her five.

Miss Wilson finally squared the match at the short ninth, where Miss Collett hooked to the rough and then pitched into a trap. Under the flag with her third, she holed out in four while the Chicago player holed high from the tee, down in par three.

MATCH IS SQUARED.

The cards:

Par, out.....	4	5	4	6	5	5	5	4	—43
Collett, out....	5	6	4	6	5	5	5	4	—45
Wilson, out..	5	7	4	6	5	5	5	3	—46

Miss Collett won the tenth hole to become 1 up, her drive carrying 30 yards beyond that of Miss Wilson and her approach dropping 25 feet from the pin for an easy par four. Miss Wilson, short with her approach, needed three to get on and then took two putts.

Miss Collett was in the brook at the eleventh and finally conceded the hole to her opponent, who played safely and carefully all the way.

The twelfth and thirteenth were halved, both getting birdie fours at the former and par threes at the latter. A saving recovery was made at the thirteenth by Miss Wilson, who pitched near to the pin from a trap and holed out in one putt.

MRS. STETSON LEADING.

Edith Cummings, former titleholder, got off to an unfavorable start against Mrs. G. Henry Stetson of Philadelphia, her topped drive skidding over water pools and sending up a shower of spray as it hopped headstrong to a point only one hundred yards from the tee.

Miss Cumming' short tee shot cost her the first hole, the Philadelphia player going down in par four to the former titleholder's five.

Miss Stetson also won the second hole when her opponent, after being trapped on her drive, sliced out of bounds and finally escaped with a seven to the Eastern woman's six. The next two holes were halved in par figures.

The fifth and sixth holes also were halved, but at the seventh Miss Cummings scored her first win of the outgoing nine with a birdie four to Mrs. Stetson's par five.

Here Mrs. Stetson's approach landed in a trap below the green, while the former champion, on strictly in two, almost sank a thirty-footer for an eagle.

Mrs. Stetson came back to win the eighth and ninth, making Miss Cummings three down at the turn. At both holes the latter was in traps.

The cards:

Mrs. Stetson—
Out...	4	6	3	6	5	5	5	3	—42
Miss Cummings—
Out...	5	7	3	6	5	4	6	4	—45

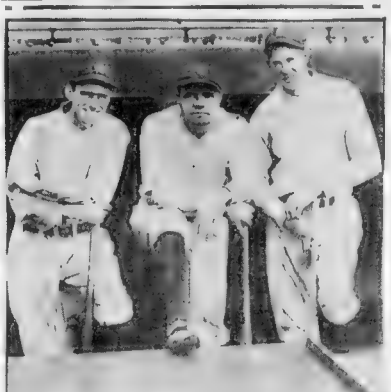

To Give Quimet Rug

Win, lose or draw, Francis Ouimet will receive an Oriental rug valued at $1,000 at the end of his two-day match with Walter Hagen, which starts today at the Sandy Burr Country Club. Brooks, Gill & Co., North Washington street, dealers in rugs, are the donors.

...ties to order him from the country at the expiration of his temporary admission October 15, and had forced him into professionalism.

While Prout refused to discuss the suit, Rubien, in New York, issued a flat denial of Hoff's charges and revealed for the first time that the official reason for the removal of the A. A. U.'s sanction was irregularities in the financial end of...tour.

"Neither I nor anyone else in authority in the A. A. U. has had anything to do with the action of immigration officials, who notified Hoff his time limit here expired October 15," said Mr. Rubien. "We are not concerned whether Hoff stays here or not. The A. A. U. washed its hands of his case when it suspended him last Spring as a result of irregularities in the financial end of his tour."

At the office of Immigration Commissioner Day at Ellis Island, it was said that a routine letter had been sent to Hoff at Hollywood, Cal., on Sept. 22, informing him of the action taken by the immigration authorities at Washington.

The Norwegian pole vaulter came to this country last November at the invitation of the Amateur Athletic Union, and made a tour of the larger cities under their sanction. At Chicago a controversy arose and resulted in the all-powerful sports organization withdrawing its support and practically inviting Hoff to go home.

Mr. Prout, who is a national official and was chairman of the committee that handled Hoff's case when questioned about the matter, would only say:

"I know nothing about it. Any statement made in this matter will be issued at the Amateur Athletic Union headquarters in New York."

It is fair last when the Hoff controversy was at its height, Mr. Prout, who is chairman of the committee on foreign relations, said that he alone was not responsible for the ban placed on the pole vaulter. He said the committee as a whole was responsible, but refused to reveal the nature of the charges against Hoff.

"As far as we are concerned," he stated in commenting on stories of alleged professionalism on the part of the Norwegian, "Hoff's amateur standing is O. K. everywhere."

This statement further mystified sport followers, who were unable to puzzle out the reason why the A. A. U. withdrew its sanction from the pole vaulter, and virtually requested him to go home. Prout maintained at that time that Hoff had been told why he was in disfavor.

The other defendants named ... alternative was to professionalize ... F. W. Rubien, also a national offi...cial, and R. S. Weaver, who, in addition to serving on the foreign relations committee of the body, is president of the Southern Pacific Division.

The vault king, who recently took out a dancing and vaulting act on a vaudeville circuit, cheered that since leaving New York in April he has not received any expense money, and was forced to pay out several thousands of dollars to meet the engagements the A. A. U. scheduled for him. He declared the understanding prevailed that the big amateur organization would return the money at the conclusion of his tour.

Hoff said that an attempt made by him to take out naturalization papers brought the information that he must first return to Norway and wait three years before he can make application to become a citizen.

The A. A. U. suspended Hoff last May for failing to appear in a meet in San Francisco. Officials of the union claimed they had barred him from further competition for his own good, alleging that their only other alternative was to professionalize him.

Pyle Silent, But Those Inside Say Richards Signed

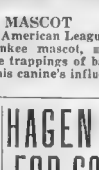

NEW YORK, Sept. 30 (I. N. S.).—C. C. Pyle, manager of Suzane Lenglen and Red Grange, declined today to deny or affirm statements that he had appointed Vincent Richards with a proposition to team up with Mlle. Lenglen on her tennis tour of the country, beginning at Madison Square Garden on October 5. However, those close to tennis affairs insist that Richards will be the next star to sign with Pyle.

Announcement of other conquests will be made tonight by Pyle at a dinner he is to give in Mlle. Lenglen's honor.

Last Chance Today for Football Selections

Tell Herb Treat How Leading Grid Games Saturday Will End

Herb Treat's Contest

Accompany your selections with a letter of 100 words explaining them.

Mail them to the TREAT CONTEST EDITOR, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass., before midnight on Thursday.

Watch for Treat's selections on Friday.

BOSTON COLLEGE	☐	CATHOLIC UNIV.	☐
HARVARD	☐	GENEVA COLLEGE	☐
HOLY CROSS	☐	ST. JOHN'S	☐
PRINCETON	☐	AMHERST	☐
YALE	☐	BOSTON UNIV.	☐

Mark your scores in the spaces provided.

TODAY is the last day! Fans, you have only until midnight tonight to send in your selections for the five Saturday's football games printed on the accompanying coupon.

Come on, all you Herb Treats! Next week you will be wishing for those free tickets to see your favorite eleven in action.

Tomorrow the American will publish Herb Treat's own predictions. Yours, therefore, must be in the hands of the contest editor bearing postmarks not later than midnight tonight in order to be considered.

What is Harvard going to do to Geneva? What sort of a showing will Boston University make against the Elis? How will Holy Cross meet the conquerors of Lehigh? What of Princeton and Boston College?

Last year Treat told you. Now it's your turn to tell him. The three fans who come closest will be awarded a pair of free tickets to the three games featuring local outfits. Ties will be determined by the letters, of one hundred words, which accompany your selections.

Here are the rules of the contest. Step on it, for the time is nearly up.

Three pairs of tickets to the three best games in the local sector will be given each week to those fans who come closest to the actual scores of five games which will be announced every Monday.

Selections must be accompanied by 100-word letters explaining the reason for the choices, and these letters will be the basis of determining the winners of any ties that may occur.

Letters postmarked later than Thursday midnight of each week will not be considered, as Treat's own selections will be printed on Friday.

Boston College—no game.
Catholic University—no game.
Harvard—no game.
Geneva 0, Cornell 6.
Holy Cross 24, Newport 0.
St. John's 7, Lehigh 0.
Princeton—no game.
Amherst 35, Rochester 0.
Yale—no game.
Boston U. 0, Bowdoin 6.

TUNNEY TO VISIT HARTFORD NEXT WEEK

Hartford, Ct., Sept. 24.—Gene Tunney, the newly crowned heavyweight king, will visit this city next week.

He will be the guest of Edwin S. Dewling, a real estate broker, with whom the champion golfed in Florida.

Hobart All Set for Dartmouth

Geneva, Sept. 30—The plucky Orange and Purple gridders of Hobart College will meet Dartmouth at Hanover on Saturday with a stronger offensive than was presented at Syracuse last Saturday, when Hobart held Big Bill Orange to 13 points, the lowest score ever made against the Genevans by Syracuse.

Head Coach Vincent S. (Deak) Welch spent the available time so far this week in reviewing and correcting mistakes made by Hobart warriors in the game against the powerful Syracuse eleven. He also instructed his squad in new plays devised expressly for the Dartmouth game.

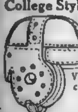

Hobart emerged from the Syracuse game intact, and Welch reports his entire squad in fine shape and ready to battle the Hanoverians. Although conceding a more powerful attack, Welch would not hazard a guess regarding the possibilities of Hobart scoring against Dartmouth.

Twenty-two men comprising the Hobart squad leave here this evening on this trip to Hanover, N. H.

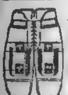

ROGERS, N. H. HALFBACK OUT WITH BROKEN RIB

Durham, Sept. 30.—John Rogers of Everett, Mass., who has been playing a strong game at left halfback on the University of New Hampshire eleven, will be unable to start Saturday against Bowdoin owing to a fractured rib sustained in the Marine game last week. His place will be filled by "Sandy" Roy, last year's freshman captain, whose fifty-yard run after receiving a forward pass provided one of the big thrills of last Saturday's encounter.

HARTZ ANXIOUS TO KEEP CROWN

The most important automobile race of the year 1926 is scheduled for Columbus Day, October 12, at the Rockingham Motor Speedway, at Salem, N. H. On the outcome of the three races, two 25 mile sprints and one 200 mile grind, will largely depend the question of who will be the world's champion for the present season.

Harry Hartz, who at present is in the lead, is already at Rockingham, grooming his faithful steel steed for the supreme test on the popular Fall holiday. That Harry is sure to be in the running is taken as a certainty, for this season he has been the most consistent performer of them all.

The man who is second to Hartz is Frank Lockhardt, young California flash who won the big Indianapolis classic on Decoration Day.

Exeter Grooms for First Tilt

Exeter, N. H., Sept. 29.—Exeter's football eleven is being drilled for the opening game with Cushing Academy here, Saturday afternoon, and every effort is being made to atone for the last year's defeat.

Coach Blake and his assistant, Van Langen, have some good material which they are developing including several Greater Boston boys.

Prominent among them are Francis and Thomas Gilgun of Newton, the former a veteran of last year, and Thomas who was quarterback at Newton High last year.

"Red" Finvalson of Cambridge and guard at Hebron Academy, and McCabe of Newton are promising line men who are expected to be in the line up.

Oscar Thompson of Natick, veteran fullback, and Frederick Dawson of Framingham, quarterback, are also expected to start.

CLEVELAND GIVES LEE TO NEWARK FOR FONSECA

Cleveland, Sept. 30 (A.P.).—Outfielder Cliff Lee of the Cleveland Indians goes to the Newark Internationals in the deal involving other Indian players whose names have not been announced, which will bring Lou Fonseca to the Indian lineup. Lee was taken from the St. Paul Association Club by draft two years ago. He is a former National leaguer.

B. U. COACHES PICK ELEVEN

By MAURICE KRAMER

"Sandy" Shaffert, a varsity fullback on last year's team, has been shifted to an end position on the B. U. eleven. This change was brought about by Coach Reggie Brown in an effort to bolster up the "Terrier" line for the game with Yale Saturday.

Red Murphy, who sprained his ankle in the Bowdoin game, is out in uniform again. Jimmy Steele has also donned his togs again. If these two men are fit by Saturday they will most likely start at the extremities of the line, but Shaffert will be ready for relief duty.

Dorr has rounded into shape and will hold down one of the guard positions.

Chancey French has recovered from a strained side and will hold down the other guard position. Hoag will start at center. Jerome and Traniello will probably start at tackle.

The backfield is causing Brown little worry. His only trouble is in picking out the men to start. Captain Don MacDonald and "Dumpy" Halliday will be the halfbacks and Ralph Harnden will be given the fullback assignment. Just who will begin the game at quarterback has not been determined yet.

Rindge and B. C. H. Elevens Battle Tomorrow

By EDDIE DONDERO

Rindge Technical School has made ready to vacate the Suburban League basement. Bill Kelliher's clan has every intention of redeeming itself.

Eddie Dondero

Rindge and Boston College High stage their annual conflict tomorrow afternoon at Russell Field with neither contestant being an overwhelming favorite.

It means that Jack Heaphy, Eaglet coach, and Bill Kelliher, the opposing supervisor, each will be represented by an eleven flashing the Cavanaugh method of footballing. They played together at University Heights where each earned fine reputations.

One of the leading scholastic combats of the season should we witnessed. Danny Coffey, fullback and punter extraordinary on the Cambridge outfit, is mending a fractured left ankle. Joe Welch, who proved a capable replacement in the Marblehead game recently, will start along with "Mal" Ross, John Skots and "Al" McKee in the Kelliher backfield.

Captain Harold Enquist, the 160 pound center, is a fighter from the opening whistle. The Rindge defense is built around him.

Prescott Davis and Jake Staffon, guards; Dean Moores and N. W. Meeker, tackles; Eugene Courtney and "Al" Harlow, ends, complete the frontier. Courtney played two years ago as a regular, returned to school last fall and was automatically declared eligible in September.

The Cantabs were hit hard by graduation like Rindge and the teams are evenly matched. Frederick Harlow, diminutive quarterback on the McDonald brigade, will start at the signal calling assignment. His big brother "Al" will cover a wing position for Rindge, a bitter rival, so brotherly love will mean very little in this instance.

Capt. Charles Cook, the Latin leader will direct his teammates in Newburyport on the week end in an exhibition contest. According to the authorities Rindge has been permitted to play its home games on Friday instead of Saturday by league sanction.

Inside Golf

When the right hand pull is introduced into the back swing the right arm not only takes possession of the club, but it invariably draws itself in ward, toward the body, which is bad. Some players have found a successful cure for this by making the right hand, at the beginning of the back swing, resist the left arm, push slightly. This certainly keeps the left side fixedly at its work in the back swing, though the player who does this should be careful to release this right-hand pressure some time before he gets to the top of the back swing. The natural tendency is to speed things up as the club swings backward, and naturally as the speed increases the right-hand pressure will automatically increase too, so that if this keeps up you will have too great a pressure near the top. In fact, it will cause your arms and shoulders to stiffen and become rigid. Make the right-hand pressure so light that it doesn't become a drag.

Sharkey Will Weigh 191 Pounds for Wills Fight

EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

Distance of Bout Will Play an Important Part in Outcome

By JACK CONWAY

JACK SHARKEY weighed 191 pounds when he stepped on the scales after his first day of training for his fifteen-round battle with Harry Wills, which will be staged under the direction of Humbert Fugazy at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, on October 12.

Sharkey had just completed eight rounds of strenuous boxing in which he displayed a world of natural class, aggressiveness and real fighting ability.

Jack Conway

Sharkey will continue working at Kelley & Hayes' Gym today and tomorrow. He will then hop over to New York and complete his work at Stillman's Gym.

Johnny Buckley, Sharkey's manager, returned to Boston today from New York after completing all negotiations for the contest. Buckley stated that Promoter Fugazy believes the contest will attract a half million dollar gate. Fugazy will be remembered as the promoter who staged the great Italian Hospital show a year ago last Summer and who more recently stepped in and put on the Delaney-Berlenbach mill.

If Sharkey wins over Wills, he will be the logical contender for a bout with Gene Tunney. In fact there will be fans who will immediately acclaim Jack as the world's leading heavyweight, as neither Tunney or Dempsey will consent to risk an exchange of blows with Wills.

The distance of the bout, which is fifteen rounds, will favor Sharkey, according to experts on physical condition. They point out that the aged Wills is sure to tire after five rounds while Sharkey, with youth on his side, should be able to set a lively pace for the full fifteen rounds if necessary.

AL WINKLER, Philadelphia featherweight, is expected to arrive in town on Saturday to complete training for his ten-round setto with Babe Herman of California, which will be staged by the Commercial Club at Mechanics Building on next Tuesday night. Winkler won fame when he was awarded the decision over Honeyboy Finnegan in a swatfest in the Quaker City. In the ninth round, Winkler was so unkind as to drop Finnegan for the count of nine with a sock to the chin.

There should be plenty of heavy punching when Winkler parades into action against Herman. The latter has always been rated as one of the best punchers of his weight in the world. Last Summer he tipped Tod Morgan, world's junior lightweight champion, over several times when they mingled at Revere.

The winner of the Winkler-Herman muss will probably be pitted against Honeyboy Finnegan.

MATCHMAKER Tom Goodwin of the Suffolk A. A. has signed a contract which will give him exclusive rights for boxing shows at the New Boston Arena. Since a balcony with 3,300 seats was installed at the St. Botolph street playhouse, it is one of the largest places for indoor boxing in this country. The Arena is now able to handle close to 14,000 fans which makes it the largest indoor boxing spot in the East other than Madison Square Garden.

Goodwin says Sharkey, Mello, Maloney, McCarthy, Fuller, Lee and other fistic leaders will be seen in action at the Arena. Arrangements have been completed by which it will be possible to stage weekly shows at the Arena even during the hockey season.

Win or Lose, Jack Still Is Estelle's Champion

By SONIA LEE

New York, Sept. 30.—"I didn't marry the heavyweight title. I married Jack Dempsey. Win or lose, he's still champion to me."

Estelle Taylor, film star and wife of the ex-champion, today took occasion to deny her advertised opposition to her husband's profession.

In the Dempsey suite at the Belmont Hotel, where Jack is nursing his bruises gained in the late unpleasantness with Mr. Tunney, Estelle with rather surprising vigor, made her position clear.

"I have never taken an interest in boxing," she said. "I wouldn't know the difference between an uppercut or a lowercut. But I have no more right to influence him with regard to it than I would if he was a broker in Wall street.

"I have the utmost faith in his ability. Failure once doesn't mean failure twice. If he should fight again I may not be at the ringside—because no woman likes to see her man mauled, but I am rooting for him, as every wife does for her husband in his every endeavor.

DEADERICH HAILED AS CHAMPION "DECK GOLFER"

Aboard S. S. Finland, Sept. 30 (I.N.S.)—M. M. Deaderich of St. Petersburg, Fla., today was acclaimed the world's champion "deck golfer" following his defeat of W. A. Schneckenberger, of Buffalo, who was defeated two up. The champion and runner-up are members of a group of Eastern bankers en route to Los Angeles for the Bankers' National Convention.

YANKS SLIGHT FAVORITES IN BIG SERIES

will probably get busy today. Lots of the boys coming in from the West will be minus ducats, and money will be no object. But the sidewalk brokers will have no big blocks of choice seats.

The good ones have been distributed to the cash customers. The real fans have been given as much of a break as is possible under series conditions, and there isn't any of the customary screeching.

THE fever and the excitement that usually precedes a series has been quieted by the death of Rogers Hornsby's mother. Baseball is mourning with the stout hearted leader of the Cards.

Rogers, faced with the double task of managing and playing, will now carry an extra burden of sorrow into the big series of his life. No World Series player has ever had to come to the mark under such fearful conditions.

But the great Card manager will meet the test. He's quiet and never has much to say. He isn't parading his grief now. But he's a sorrowful young man as he is directing his athletes in their final preparations.

Baseball has always been a serious business with Manager Rogers. That's why he is so great. And this series is the highest spot in his life career. He will be a grim and tragic figure, out there on the field, and will probably rise to his greatest heights. There's something in his makeup which responds to the grim and the tragic.

HORNSBY, naturally, isn't saying much about baseball today. But he wouldn't under ordinary circumstances. He dismisses the series with a brief:

"We have a great ball team, a fighting club. We won the pennant by wearing out the others, and we will win this series the same way. We have no special plans. We'll just play a ball game every day. And we know we have enough stuff to win more than we lose."

Which is a lot of baseball philosophy packed into very few words.

BABE RUTH, who, in our opinion hauled the Yanks to this unexpected pennant, will march into this series without a thing bothering him.

Other years, the Bam had sore arms and bad legs and countless other troubles. This time, he's ready. He has had plenty of rest and has tossed off the leg weakness that had him down in mid-Summer. He expects to shine in this collision.

Nebraska 'N' Club Applies to Join A. A. U.

Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 30 (A.P.)—An innovation in college athletics, which its sponsors hope will form the proper connecting link between amateur athletic union and colleges, has been started at the University of Nebraska.

The University "N" Club, composed of all wearers of the athletic "N" and which has heretofore been concerned wholly with college athletic development now has decided to arrange for graduate members to compete in amateur events as members of the "N" Club. The club will apply for membership in the A. A. U.

One of the first to join the competing body is Roland Locke, track flash who ripped up the cinder paths last Spring to dispute Charlie Paddock's claim as the "fastest human." Billy Heine, Locke's diminutive running mate for three seasons also has joined the organization.

Budget Helps to Plan Wedding Trousseau

Budget Talk No. 165
By MARTHA LEE

ONE little girl is going to be married. She has budgeted and saved until she has about $90 on hand for her wedding dress ensemble, and she wants to know how far that money will go toward making her about the prettiest Fall bride in New England.

If she is the type of girl who is endowed with enough common sense to plan ahead for her needs, a certain man is getting a jewel whether she is gowned in gleaming white and orange blossoms or not. But a wedding dress and veil seem to be absolutely necessary to make the big step a complete success, so here goes.

Plan on $39.50 for your gown, and about $12.50 for the veil. White silk chiffon hosiery will be $1.85 and the satin slippers approximately $8.

Your silk vest will be $1.65, and a combination brassiere and step-in $6.50. Then plan on paying $5 for the white silk slip and $5 for the corselette. And there you are, all dressed in a lovely bridal costume for $82, with $8 left over for extras for a bride.

About $162 will cover a general Winter ensemble. A good quality Winter coat with fur collar and cuffs will cost about $98.50. An afternoon dress of the better kind is in the average of $39.50 with a dressy hat around $15.00. A pair of these modish pull on cape gloves can be bought for $3.50, while your kid or patent leather shoes will be $10. Two pairs of light hose at $1.85 a pair, and a dainty novelty handkerchief for 60c completes the outfit, and gives the bride a harmonious costume which she can slip into at any time and feel dressed to perfection.

If you have any questions on clothing budgets, home or personal budgets, make out the little coupon and send it in. Our budget form, which will then be sent to you, has helped thousands to find their way out of debt and on the road to the things that make life worth living.

Priscilla Price shopped for all the items I've mentioned today and will be glad to tell you where the best buys lurk. Service is our middle name.

How to Budget for Family of Three on $55 Weekly Income

Mrs. H. R. F. has persuaded her family to budget commencing October 1. Asks how $55 should be divided for family of three.

No doubt the standard budget for $55 will meet your needs. This allows $5.50 for savings and insurance, $11 for shelter and business carfares, $15.75 for food and husband's lunches, $1.25 for [illegible] meaning heat, gas, light, [illegible] laundry and [illegible] [illegible] clothing and $4.75 for [illegible]

Mrs. B. M. [illegible] steam engineer [illegible] weekly when [illegible] but when [illegible] to as $1 a week. Asks [illegible] get such an uncertain income. [illegible] $3,700 on their home. Have paid off $400 on principal in six years, besides original payment of $ [illegible] Pay 6 per cent. interest on mortgage. Family of husband, self and grandfather.

The very best you can do is to figure out what is the lowest average weekly salary your husband receives. Let's say that this is $22. Set down what your fixed expenses are and see if you could possibly get along on the following budget: Saving and insurance $2.20, food $9.50, shelter (which in your case means the fire insurance, interest on the mortgage, taxes and repairs on the house and business carfares, (if any), $3.40, clothing $3.30, operating $2.30 and persons, $2.30. I'd suggest putting $1 a week of your savings toward paying off the principal of the mortgage. Then when you have a few weeks pay, you can [illegible] where it is most [illegible]

Miss [illegible] a business girl earning $ [illegible] a week asks how much [illegible] save. Ten per cent. is the usual proportion of one's income allowed for savings. This means $1.80, and may either go into the bank or into insurance. You can afford to pay $8.10 for room and board and business carfares. This amount should include your noon time lunches. For toilet articles, postage all personal service, such as shoe shines, telephone, manicures, hair dressing, etc., $1.70. Personal must cover newspapers, magazines, all amusements, vacations, travel, gifts and pleasure carfares.

"You Said It, Marceline!"

On "Young Risks and Old Securities"

By Marceline d'Alroy

When YOUTH MARRIES YOUTH
People think BOTH of them are TAKING A RISK. But when a
YOUNG GIRL marries an OLD MAN
They think SHE is merely LOOKING OUT for HER FUTURE.

AT THE SAME TIME
It must SURELY be more
PLEASANT to TAKE A YOUNG RISK than
To LOOK AFTER an OLD SECURITY.

When OLD AGE touches YOUTH
The HEART of youth grows
OLDER. The SOUL of old age
Does NOT grow younger.
MARRIAGE, like death, is Not a RE-FORMATION.

It is MERELY an EXPOSURE.
The bond of youth
May not be GILT-EDGED,
But it can be TINTED
WITH GLORY.

Martha Lee's Recipes

ONE of the bright spots on the Fall landscape has arrived. You'll find it now in the markets and on the vegetable stalls, and you will be as glad as the proverbial lark to see it, because that old question of "What to do to change the monotony of the daily menu?" is solved for weeks to come.

It's cranberries. Sounds ungrammatical—but mighty welcome, too, doesn't it? Yes, my heart took two or three extra skips and jumps when I sighted a big box of little jewels over in a Summer street provision store. And immediately visions of round crimson globes of jelly flashed across my vision.

Now did the cranberry first discover the Cape, or did the Cape first discover the cranberry? At any rate, the cranberry certainly put the Cape on the map for most of us long before the real estate agents began staking it out into building lots.

Now I don't need to tell you that cranberries are good for that is old news, but it may be news that cranberries are a good [illegible] to boot. They are [illegible] sugar, lime, iron and [illegible]. They help correct that tired feeling, that run-down, depressed [illegible] due to too much [illegible] by making the blood [illegible]. And they are a tonic which tends to prevent rheumatism.

So let the cranberry enter into your menus as often as possible.

Cranberries can do almost anything. If you make them into a simple sauce, they will fit into pies, puddings, tarts, shortcake, mousse and sherbet before you know it.

Cranberry Sauce—One quart cranberries, 2 cups boiling water, 1¾ to 2 cups sugar.

Boil the sugar and water together for 5 minutes. Then skim and add the cranberries and boil without stirring until all the skins are broken. Usually this takes about 5 minutes. Remove from the fire when the popping stops.

Cranberry Meringue Pie—Put 1½ cups of cranberry sauce into a pan. Add half a cup of cold water, ⅝ cups of sugar and cook ten minutes. Cover with a meringue made as follows: Beat together the whites of two eggs until they are stiff. Add gradually two tablespoons of powdered sugar and continue beating. Then add half a tablespoon of lemon juice or ¼ teaspoon of vanilla. Cook in a very slow oven for 8 minutes. Open your oven door if the oven is too hot, for the secret of a successful meringue is to bake it slowly.

Steamed Cranberry Pudding—Beat 2 eggs well, add 1-3 cup of sugar and ¼ cup milk, then 2 cups of flour, ½ teaspoon salt, and 2 teaspoonfuls of baking powder, all sifted together. Stir in 1 cup of thickened cranberry sauce, cut into cubes. (The ready prepared stiff sauce is handy in this recipe.) Butter a pudding mold and steam 1½ hours. Serve with hard sauce.

And do try this smacking good Cranberry Filling—Put 1 quart cranberries in a saucepan. Add 2-3 cup of cold water and boil until the skins break. Strain and add 2-3 cup of boiling water, ¼ pound seeded raisins, ¼ pound English walnut meats (chopped), and juice of 1 orange and 3 cups of sugar. Bring to the boiling point again and simmer 20 minutes. Thin with hot water if too thick to spread easily.

Faithfully Yours,
MARTHA LEE.

Furnishing the Home

—By Marian Moore—

Were we to sit down and give a credit for every nice quality in this room, we should have a well-filled scorecard at the end, I am sure: this dining room is satisfying in so many details.

Its chief charm, if we want to analyze the scheme, lies in this: There is fine harmony in the various textures employed. First of all, the lovely Heppelwhite furniture is developed in mahogany—and what is more appropriate for combination with this rich wood than silk, equally as smooth and fine and rich in suggestion? Against the smooth plaster walls of this particular room, cretonne or linen, you can readily see, would not have served nearly so graciously for draperies and wall hanging as the supple silk that has been used for each.

Next note the lighting fixtures disposed centrally over the table. Is it not, too, in lovely accord—with its silver, crystal and soft-toned silk? A daintily embroidered cloth, fragile colored glass, candles and flowers lend the last touch of simple elegance. It is a beautiful, refined and gracious room!

The furniture it was, surely, that set the standard for the rest of the room. No one could permit herself to humble such graceful, worthwhile pieces with accessories any less lovely. Buy for your very important dining room a suite of furniture that offers "something to live up to."

(Write to Marian Moore, care of this newspaper, for advice or information about your home furnishing problems, sending stamped addressed envelope for reply.)

Causes of Foot Faults

Former President of the American Medical Association.

YOU can't get around without your feet and you can't get around with them unless they are comfortable.

The question of comfortable feet is so important that the State of New York some years ago established a bureau of pedology—that is, of footology—as a part of its State government.

The question of uncomfortable feet is not, however, local to any State or country, as shown by the fact that I have just encountered a very illuminating article on disabilities of the feet by Dr. F. B. Fouche in the Medical Journal of South Africa.

Dr. Fouche reviews the statistics of Dr. Cook, who found that 75 per cent. of male university students have recognizable weakness of the feet.

It is important that you understand that your foot serves two purposes: to propel the body forward during walking, and to support the body weight when standing. The first may be called the attitude of activity, and the second the attitude of rest.

The mechanism of the foot is different in each of these attitudes. In each the foot assumes a different shape and function.

In activity the foot is a lever of the second order; muscular power is fully employed and the ligaments that hold the bones together limit free movement.

During rest, muscular action is reduced to a minimum, the ligaments are tight and the various joints of the foot are locked, converting it into a rigid whole.

The centre of gravity then falls on the inner side of the foot; the leg, with the keystone of the arch, is rotated inwards, and the foot increased in length from heel to toe and also from side to side, while the long arch is depressed.

Other things being equal, the muscles are more easily made tired than the ligaments. When the muscles and ligaments are tired, walking is still possible, but only by placing the foot in the attitude of rest and putting an undue strain on the ligaments.

The leverage action of the foot is then lost. This is the Weak Foot, the more or less constantly Tired Foot, that may ultimately become the Flat Foot, in which the whole mechanism of the arch is disarranged, and the arch touches the ground during weight-bearing.

There are several causes of Weak Foot. The weight may be too great, as it is in men who have to lift heavy weights and in women who put on weight after childbirth or the menopause. The weight may have to be supported for too long at a time, as in nurses, messengers, operating surgeons, dentists, and others who do much standing or much walking.

Some weak feet are the result of bad training and improper use, as it is often seen in children who take dancing or gymnastic lessons where standing with the toes turned out is considered the correct thing.

Another important cause is a short "tendon of Achilles"—the "hamstring above the heel—which shortens the range through which it is possible to bend the foot upwards.

Many women complain that they cannot wear slippers without discomfort but are quite comfortable with high heels. This is because the high heel makes up for the deficiency in length of the Achilles tendon. But the low heeled slipper makes them adopt the attitude of rest and puts a strain on the ligaments on the inner side of the foot.

The Mother of Cowper

THERE are some men who are more sensitive to the gentle influence of a woman than to the sterner and more rigid guidance of a man. And to such men home life and the character of the woman who makes it agreeable is most important.

William Cowper, the talented English poet, was a sensitive nature upon whom sympathy and tenderness made a deep impression even when he was a mere child. For this reason his mother, who died when he was only six years old, exerted a lasting influence over him. This was evident when he received a photograph of her thirty-five years after her death and he wrote: "She died when I wanted two days of being six years old; yet I remember her perfectly find the picture a strong likeness of her, and, because her memory has been ever precious to me, have written a poem on the receipt of it."

There was intellect in both branches of William Cowper's parental stock. Anne Donne was the daughter of Roger Donne, who was descended from the famous satirist and divine, Dr. Donne, Dean of St. Paul's. Her husband was one of the chaplains of King George the Second and came of a very ancient family.

Consequently the home life of the young boy was an inspiration and encouragement to the expression of talent. When his mother died Cowper was cared for tenderly and kindly by a Mrs. Unwin, who did everything possible to take the place of the mother, and who won his everlasting affection and gratitude.

My colored clothes wash brighter

IT'S wonderful to watch everything come out so fresh and clean. I never knew colored things could get so bright and new-looking. And I don't even touch a washboard.

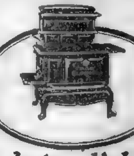

I just soak the wash in rich Rinso suds. Dirt and stains float off by themselves. Clothes get whiter and brighter than I could scrub them.

Rinso is a granulated laundry soap, and it's all I need on washday. No bar soaps, chips or harsh chemicals. I like it because it softens the water and gives thick suds.

So easy on my hands! They don't get a bit red or washworn. Ask your grocer for

The WOMAN GAME or "GLITTER" by KATHARINE BRUSH

CHAPTER XXXIII.

IT was a relief to hear her say that she would. She said other things, too, unconsciously remedying the deficiencies in his plea for pardon.

"You didn't mean it, of cohse. You were just beside yoahself on account of the othah. I know. Don't think any moah about it, Jock."

The grace and promptness with which she forgave him disquieted him. That wasn't like Eunice. It was more like Brad. It was more like Brad! Did she also, then, talk at the dictation of those dead and sightless, yet somehow seeing, living, penetrating Eyes?

He thought she did. Grotesquely he thought of a Punch-and-Judy show . . . Eunice and he, puppets, motivated and controlled by a hidden presence who spoke aloud now through their mouths.

He sat down again beside her. "Now!" he said, making a determined attempt to throw himself beyond the shadow of this awe. "That's all over. Go on with what you were saying, Eunice. About the rotten gossip—I'm sorry it worries you so."

"It neahly kills me!"

"I know. It's a crime."

"If Brad knew," Eunice went on, slowly and stumblingly, "I—I don't know what he'd do. He wouldn't stand foah it, though, I'm suah of that. He'd nevah let me be persecuted and insulted the way I am being every day of my life. He'd do somethin'!"

She looked expectantly at Jock. He said the only thing he could think of that might be what she was waiting for. "What do you suppose that he would do?"

"Oh, cried Eunice, "what difference does it make what he'd do? He's gone—and I haven't got anybody——"

"You have me," Jock reminded her quietly. "You know very well I'll do anything in my power, for Brad's sake. And—for your sake, too, of course. But what is there I can do? I don't see——"

Eunice interrupted. "Wheah I come from," she said—and even the inflections of her voice on these first four words struck Jock as ominous, "wheah I come from, when a girl has been put in a compromisin' position, and theah is scandal around about her and some man, no mattah whethah it's his fault or not, the man—if he's honorable—offahs her the protection of his name——"

Silence, surcharged. Then Jock heard someone who sounded like himself at long distance say incredulously, "You mean—you think I ought to marry you—on account of this thing?"

"I mean I think that's what Brad would want you to do under the circumstances," answered Eunice, low.

Her gaze was upon him, her expression a thing mixed and undecipherable. But Jock was not looking at Eunice. He was looking once more toward the picture of Brad in the polychrome frame on the table. He was questioning it silently, fearfully. And he saw the picture nod at him . . . he would have sworn all the rest of his days on the actuality of that nod. . . .

"I see," he murmured, stiff-lipped. "I see."

(Oh, Yvonne! Yvonne!)

Where the Money Came From to Pay for Jock's Education

Mrs. Hamill was entertaining. All her guest were men, and at first glance there appeared to be hundreds of them, so wholly did they fill her house with tailored black and starched white and polished leather.

As a matter of fact they numbered sixty. Bennett, the butler, had counted them, afterward sidling to his mistress to whisper the total. "Sixty tonight, Madam." And Mrs. Hamill had inclined her shingle-bobbed silver head in satisfaction. Sixty was quite as it should be.

They had arrived between the hours of ten and twelve, these guests, in a succession of motor cars sleek and correct and opulent, like themselves. They would depart again at dawn. In the meantime, rather incredible sums of money were changing hands across the little green baize tables in the card room, and above the long checker-boarded tables with clicking wheels sunk in their ends that lined the great salon.

And of the rather incredible sums a goodly portion would come to permanent rest at last in the soft small hands of Madelaine Hamill. Of course, One does not convert one's home into a casino of Chance for nothing.

Hour after hour she moved through the crowded rooms, smiling, greeting, exchanging badinage, seeing to it that highball glasses were often refilled and that matches were plentiful, noting mechanically whose chips towered high on the roulette tables and whose dwindled.

Now and then she stopped to follow the progress of a hand of bridge, or to stand behind some chair in obedience to the occupant's plea that she do so "to change my luck;" then strolled on again, a nomadic dart of color against the somber background provided by sixty suits of masculine evening clothes.

She was wearing an orange gown that outlined her figure abruptly as a scissored paper-doll's and lit wee dancing lanterns in her eyes. She looked arrestingly lovely and extremely youthful, did Jock's mother. She seemed every inch the charming, the popular, the distinguished hostess; and not at all did she seem what she was . . . a lady making her living, just as she had made it every night for almost twelve years. . . .

Every night, that is, except the ones when Jock was with her. And even in twelve years there had not been many of those. Two weeks at Christmas, a week at Easter, a brief hiatus between the closing of school or college and the opening of camp or Summer school—no more.

Jock's vacations were, and had ever been, at once the glory and the bane of Madelaine Hamill's existence. They meant precious intimacy with the son she adored and knew only too little; but they meant also a wholesale housecleaning, a hiding-away of tables and wheels and all other damaging evidence, an incessant falsehood, an incessant panic for fear in some unthought of, unimaginable way, he might discover what it was that paid his bills and bought his education. . . .

"You're ridiculous," her good friend Saunders Lincoln told her often, "to try so hard to keep it secret. My dear Madelaine, surely you don't think any twentieth century college boy is going to faint away at the sight of a roulette wheel?"

And Mrs. Hamill always retorted, "No. I don't. But a woman who conducts a gambling joint, however exclusive and dignified, is nothing more or less than—a woman who conducts a gambling joint! Jock would hate the idea, and he isn't going to find out if I can help it."

Feminine logic, and therefore irrefutable.

This night plodded on in the footsteps of countless identical nights that had preceded it . . . through a murk of smoke and a dizzying flood of blue-white lights, and a tattoo of talk, throaty, monosyllabic.

Mrs. Hamill's smile became set, as though she had painted its tilt with a lipstick and said to it, "Stay that way, darn you!" She was very weary. Her orange satin slippers were little gay prisons of pain, and her head swam. She consulted a watch in a diamond nest on her wrist, and promptly felt wearier Three o'clock only . . . and no one ever left before five . . .

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

MY DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. A friend of mine is in the country. I received a card from her the other day. It contained the mere formalities and her return address. Does that require an answer?

2. If a boy takes a girl to a party, does it necessarily imply that he is to escort her home? If some one else asks for the privilege, would it be the right thing to accept?

3. Are the colors of this stationery and ink passable?

TWO DAILY READERS.

IF she is a close friend she will probably expect an answer, but if she just wanted to register her "respects" while she is away and is to return soon, she would not, probably, expects an answer.

2. The boy who takes a girl to a party would, I should think, be very much hurt and disappointed (at least socially) if the girl whom he took to a party decided to go home with another "escort." If I were a boy I should never ask her to go with me to another party. If she were that kind of discourteous girl, I am sure that taking her home would not be so much of a "privilege" as she may think.

3. I am sorry to tell you that in the years that I have conducted this column, and among the thousands of letters that I have received, the letter paper that you sent me is one of the worst that I have ever received. Now isn't that a strong statement? But it is true, and I make it, for I should like to persuade you to get some good-looking letter paper. Such a terrific, nauseous green as that paper is—ugh! And then to supplement it by using green ink—lady, or ladies, how could you? There is, to my mind no excuse in the world for green or pink letter paper. I recommend that you buy some conventional, plain white letter paper, of as fine a texture as your budget will permit. But don't use this bizarre, garish, terrible-looking paper again, or your friends will know that you have no taste. Promise?

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Is it proper for the bride's sister or the groom's sister to be maid of honor? M. G.

USUALLY the bride's sister is the maid of honor. And quite naturally this is true, for the chief attendant of the bride should be her sister. And the bride has the privilege of choosing whom she will have for this honor.

The Gentle Art of Being a 'Girl Friend' - - By Beatrice Fairfax

They Met at a Wedding

And Often Met After That

She Mistook His Attitude

And Thought He Loved Her

"DOES he love me?"

This question is asked in thousands of letters that find their way to my desk. Usually it is followed by another: "How can I find out whether he loves me?"

Invariably my reply is: "You can't find out whether he loves you until he asks you to be his wife, if ever he does."

The words "I love you" are easily said. They may mean much or practically nothing. Very often they mean: "You are a pretty girl. I am in a romantic mood. I would like to kiss you."

Try to remember that man may be very fond of you and thoroughly enjoy your companionship—he may even enjoy making love to you without feeling one spark of genuine love.

So do not, like the sentimental young lady described in the following letter, fly to the conclusion that a man loves you because he is smilingly friendly and attentive.

"DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"Some time ago my best friend married. He finally succeeded in threatening, coaxing and wheedling me into being his best man.

"I paid little or no attention to the bridesmaid, who was a girl I had never seen before.

"The married couple built their home across the way from the residence of the bridesmaid. On my first visit to them she was there.

"I have visited my married friend many times since then, for we think a great deal of each other. On each occasion, the bridesmaid has also called.

"Beyond being polite, I have made no advances whatever at any time.

"One day my friend confided to me that the bridesmaid had "fallen for" me. I ridiculed the idea, not believing it possible. But his wife confirmed his opinion.

"On later visits, I became convinced that the bridesmaid has become or is becoming soft in the head about me. It is apparent that she mistakes my friendliness for courtship. Her imagination has led her into believing I am crazy about her.

"Now this girl is extremely sensitive. I believe a rebuff would hurt her more than a knife-thrust. I find myself incapable of handling the situation.

"I don't wish to be rude to her, though I believe that only rudeness will open her eyes. To continue the courtship she imagines is going on and marry her, is out of the question.

"The only solution I can see, is to stay away from my friend. If you think it advisable I will do this, but I hope to find some other way out. I thank you for whatever advice you may give me. F. L."

Permit me to disagree with you regarding one point, my friend. The young women to whom your letter refers, is not extremely sensitive. A girl of extreme sensitiveness would not force her companionship on any man.

I suggest that for a few week ends you invite your friend and his wife to dine with you. Call for them—in your car if you have one. If she comes over the moment you arrive, make it obvious that you are entertaining them, not her.

When you are thrown in her society, state plainly, whenever the conversation turns in a general way to love and marriage—as conversation generally does from time to time—that you are not in love and have no intention of wedding for many a year. State plainly that you have not yet met a girl you would care to marry.

with her. And why couldn't she stay with Nina?

She asked Ellen after Hal had left them. Ellen had a one-room apartment in the back of an old house in the south end. There was a worn red carpet on the floor, a few battered pieces of furniture, and that was all. No pictures, no drapes, nothing to indicate Ellen's artistic calling. A dingy place that Ellen hadn't tried to make less so.

"Ellen, has Nina such a little place? I thought she had a big apartment!"

"What made you think that?"

"Oh, I don't know. But you sort of think of Nina and luxury—she's always so perfect——"

Ellen went on cold-creaming her face. She said nothing.

After they had both climbed into the lumpy wall bed and lay there thinking in the dark, Rosemary tried again. It was so funny about Nina.

"Ellen," she asked—"Ellen, you didn't finish telling me about Nina's place. Doesn't she live alone? She's never spoken of anyone else with her——"

"Well, for heaven's sake! Won't Nina keep till morning? I'm dead for sleep!" And Ellen turned her face to the wall with a prodigious yawn—and slept.

A pale sunbeam wriggled its way down the light well, slanted into Ellen's window for a brief moment and was gone. Ellen occupied what is known as "a back apartment." It was so dark the lights had to be lit, even in the morning.

"I hate Sundays," she yawned, slipping into a bedraggled negligee of what was once a baby blue chiffon, and was now a muddy and discouraged gray.

"Why?" asked Rosemary.

"'Cause I have time to look around. Most mornings I don't. Then I have to wash on Sunday, and, oh, I don't know—I hate it. Isn't this the hole, though? Did you ever see such a God-forsaken place?" Ellen banged the wall bed shut and kicked the dress she had worn last night into the closet.

Rosemary tried to laugh, tried to say something contradictory, but she couldn't. How could she? How could Ellen stand it?"

The dishes were piled up in the tiny kitchen unwashed.

Some one telephoned. Ellen came back laughing. "It's Larry. He's going to meet us at the little coffee shop in Tremont street in half an hour. Now we don't have to wash the dishes, hurrah, hurrah."

They scrambled into street clothes, Rosemary buttoning her coat over her party dress, the only thing she had.

"That's what I call luck," said Ellen, as they swung down Columbus avenue in the sunshine. "And when Hal comes over, after a while, I'll make him wash the dishes."

Larry came forward smiling. How like an old friend he was with his twinkling eyes, and the little extra squeeze of the hand for Rosemary.

"This is fine," he cried, "two beautiful women!" But he didn't look at Ellen. His eyes were all for Rosemary. They went into the little shop together, sat at a white topped table near the window. The waiter brought chilled orange juice crisp golden waffles and steaming coffee in thick white mugs.

Ellen chattered about the party, about Hal, and Mabel's latest daub, "Nude in a Garden." Once the conversation switched to Nina. "Cuyler's in town," said Larry, "I hardly expected to see Nina show up last night—"

"Who's Cuyler?" asked Rosemary.

There was an awkward pause.

Ellen looked at the little watch on her wrist. "Twelve o'clock! We've been here a solid hour. I've got to run. Hal will be battering down the door!"

Rosemary half rose, too.

"Aw don't go. Have another cup of coffee with me. I've only had one and I always drink three." Larry's voice was coaxing. He reached for Rosemary's hand, and held it under the table.

She wanted to stay—wanted so much to stay—

"Well, I'll run along," said Ellen. "If you two want to come up to my place later you can expect to roll up your sleeves and get busy!"

"Not a chance in the world," laughed Larry.

And so Ellen left them, and they were alone. He ordered more coffee, lit a cigarette and offered one to Rosemary. She shook her head, smiling.

A long silence, intimate, poignant. "There's so much I want to say to you," he said at last. "So many things I want to tell you. I couldn't in that mob last night. Sort of cheap, the way things went, with Mabel singing out about free love at the top of her lungs. Say, it's kind of a religion with me, this ideal of courage and freedom to look past the old taboos, and inhibitions, to give freely without thought of cost. And then to have your words taken out of your mouth and changed into something cheap and shoddy . . . it hurt!"

She looked at him wonderingly. How fine he was. And, oh, how big and forceful.

He was still holding her hand.

"Look here," he said, "you don't have to rush home. Let's go over and get some real old Italian cooking, and honest to God claret.

Rosemary's lips were parted. Her heart sang. He was so nice . . . so nice. . . .

"All right," she said.

They walked a few steps. "Oh, by the way. There's a little thing I ought to finish today. It won't take me twenty minutes if I can do it in the daylight. Would you think I was a hopeless killjoy if I asked you to come over to the studio for that long. We're so near it now?"

Making of a Husband--Ann Lisle

AND then the expressman came. They began carrying out trunks and bags and boxes. Jim's were tagged for the club. Mine were without any address.

"Some place as the others, lady?" asked one of the men.

"What?" I asked in a daze.

"Where to, lady? Where do these trunks and bags that ain't addressed go? Where do you want 'em delivered?"

Where indeed? Where could a heartbroken ghost that had been a woman only a few days before go when she got to the city at nine at night? Where? I had no answer. And there was no answer—save one.

There are undoubtedly hundreds of quiet, well-bred women who could break up their homes, be dismissed by their husbands without anything but a telegraphic good-by, go to the city at 9 at night and drive to a strange hotel with all their bag and baggage.

I couldn't.

When the expressman looked at my untagged trunks and asked me where they were going, I tried to contemplate arriving at a hotel alone, marching up to the desk, asking for rooms, signing the register and then following a bellboy to a cool, impersonal, strange room. I tried to say I'd send my trunks to Grand Central to wait until they were called for. I tried to plan a descent on a strange hotel. . . . But as I began to visualize the grim indifference of the city—and the idle curiosity of acquaintances I might meet, panic overtook me.

I gave Diane Petruzzi's address. She had offered me refuge from the storm. I must take it.

And now as I sit in the sitting room of the suite she gave me in the apartment over her studio, I looked around the rich comfort with which my friends in need surrounded me and wonder why I am not grateful.

Recalling all the hideous details to which I had to attend before I could leave The Birches forever, I feel that I should go down on my knees and say a prayer of gratitude because I have found such a wonderful refuge.

But what is going on in my heart runs something like this.

"Perhaps if you had gone to a hotel that night it would have been different. Jim might have pitied you. He might have come to you. He might have softened toward you because you were paying so cruelly for daring to judge him—for rebelling at his actions. He might have—"

But what is the use of such thoughts. There are, indeed, no sadder words than "it might have been." And here I am. I can't turn back the pages of the book of my life. I can't do it differently. I can't undo one blunder I have made—one step Jim has taken.

I telegraphed Diane Petruzzi before I left The Birches that night. When I got to the city she was at the station to meet me. She piled my bags in her gray car, gave my trunk checks into the hands of the expressman at the station, whirled me to her apartment and had me in bed and drinking a delicious cool punch almost before I had time to be glad or sorry that I had taken her at her word and had fled to her.

She kept me in bed for two days, waiting on me as tenderly as a mother, keeping everyone away from the floor where I was stowed, muting the very work that went on in her studio below so that I should not be too much aware of it.

I was too dazed and worn to do much thinking at first, and when at last I was strong enough to get up and look about, I found that I had a study as well as a bed room and that my trunks were unpacked, my bureau drawers arranged and my closets filled with familiar garments.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mrs. Annie Kwinski of 526 1st Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., writes that she became so weak and run down that she was not able to do her housework. She saw the name Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the paper and said to her husband, "I will try that medicine and see if it will help me." She says she took six bottles and is feeling much better.

Mrs. Mattie Adams, who lives in Downing Street, Brewton, Ala., writes as follows: "A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and since taking it I feel like a different woman."

With her children grown up, the middle-aged woman finds time to do the things she never had time to do before—read the new books, see the new plays, enjoy her grandchildren take an active part in church and civic affairs. Far from being pushed aside by the younger set, she finds a full, rich life of her own. That is, if her health is good.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By John P. Medbury

TRAFFIC conditions are getting so bad in the big cities that thousands of people all over the country are beginning to take walking lessons.

IT requires months of practice to become a successful pedestrian.

ONE man started crossing the street last Tuesday and he hasn't reached the other side yet.

HE was hit by so many automobiles that he had to hire a public accountant to take their license numbers.

IT'S getting so bad that pedestrians will have to begin wearing stop lights on their coat tails.

ONE fellow has a system of getting even with motorists who run over him. He always fills his pockets with tacks.

BUT even that doesn't always work A chauffeur had him arrested the other day and made him pay for the punctures.

IN New York City the pedestrians are lucky There are so many taxis in town that you can get hit at any time of the day or night.

SOME of the drivers are so obliging that they'll even come up on the sidewalk after you.

ONE man came to New York for local color, and he got it. He's black and blue from being struck by yellow cabs.

HE says that every time he hears a horn he lies down from force of habit.

SINCE the manufacturers started putting balloon tires on their cars, pedestrians are being run over with much more comfort.

ONE fellow claims he likes California because the streets are softer.

HE says that their concrete roads never give him a headache.

IN Chicago there are so many accidents that the garages are taking the shock absorbers off the automobiles and putting them on pedestrians.

IN another two or three years pedestrianism will be a lost art and anybody who wants to cross the street will have to buy an automobile or stay on the other side.

DAILY SHORT STORY

LOVE VS. BANKRUPTCY

By Jack Woodford

WAITRESSES aren't easy to find. Not the right kind. So Morris found after trying out a succession of them.

Home from college he found his mother in a critical condition. He could not leave her yet, neither could she leave the house in which she had lived practically her entire lifetime, nearly a hundred and fifty miles from New York.

Jobs in the vicinity were unheard of It would be impossible to commute daily to New York, unless one went by aeroplane; and the family exchequer most certainly allowed for the purchase of no aeroplanes.

He had solved the difficulty by opening a little lunch room on the edge of the auto road It paid excellently, far beyond his expectations—but there was the waitress problem—that is, until the coming of Gertrude.

Most of the waitresses he had engaged before had utterly loathed working "way out in the country" and had manifested this inward loathing as an outward Grief Complex that so disheartened the customers that lots of them, which otherwise might have, never came back again even though the little log cabin lunchroom by the side of the road had a most tempting exterior, and delicious food, cooked under the watchful eye of Morris' mother.

Gertrude had driven up one day in a dilapidated car. Leaning the tin can against the porch she had come in for sandwiches. Instantly she had fallen in love with the place—or was it "the place?"—phychologists might have had another theory here, for Morris was the handsomest chap within a hundred and fifty miles of New York —which is saying something.

The girl was slim, blonde and dainty She had blue eyes that had a way of enlarging when one looked into them: she had crumpled red lips that were a livid temptation; and her voice was just slightly husky, sounding like the skin of a peach tastes. Morris never took his eye from her as she ate. When she had finished she walked over to the cashier's desk to pay her check.

"I perfectly loved those sandwiches," she said, "and I think that this is the dearest little restaurant I ever saw—but your waitresses, oh!—why do you have that kind She positively takes the flavor out of the food."

"I know," mourned Morris—"If I had a girl like you in here I'd make a million dollars."

"You would!—" she said thoughtfully, "well now, isn't it a shame that—you know, I'm a stenographer in New York. I bought that old iron you see out front to drive to Boston on my vacation I love it out in the country—I was born and reared in the country, and I perfectly detest the city. How much would you give me—and where could I live?" Morris was aghast.

"You—a waitress! Absurd. Unthinkable!" But in the end she prevailed and sent to New York for her things, and moved into the big old mansion back from the road with Morris' mother. She was perfectly delighted with the lovely, large, old fashioned room with a view of the ocean, and she loved waiting on the table during the day. And the customers.

They thronged the place! Morris, however, was not happy. As a matter of fact, he was extremely unhappy. One evening after the restaurant had closed, and he was walking home with her through the woods, with the moon so bright that one could see fifty feet away, all of the stars out, and myriad little living things in the trees and bushes symphonically singing their adulation of the moon, he stopped and turned to her. They could see the lights of the house a short way ahead of them.

"Gertrude," he said simply, " I am going to discharge you." Gertrude almost fainted. She thought of the lovely room to which she was going, with its charming old fashioned furniture, and its latticed windows that opened out into trees where the birds sat and sang to wake her up in the morning. Tears filled her eyes.

"But I've done my best . . ." she began weakly.

"You've done too darn well. Customers instead of just stopping here —the men particularly—on the way to or from Boston, drive all the way out here just to have you smile at them and kid them along as they eat—and they eat so many sandwiches, in order to prolong their visits, that I'll bet some of them die of indigestion when they get back to town. I won't have anyone talking to you and kidding you that way."

"But why—?"

"Because . . ." Suddenly she was in his arms: "I love you." His lips were on hers. "I'm mad about you." It seemed to Gertrude that the moon did a nose dive and the crickets and frogs for a moment sang twice as loud. "And I want you—all to myself—forever." She let her hands wander to his curly hair. "I don't want anybody ever to speak to you but me"

His lips were on her throat, her cheeks. Warm. Wet. Almost cruelly. She was faint with delight. "I want to hide you away all for myself. You adorable little child-girl. It means bankruptcy, of course; but what's bankruptcy? When I take you out of the restaurant and put in another frump, nobody will come. But nothing matters but whether or not you'll have a big awkward boob like me—will you, little angel . . .?"

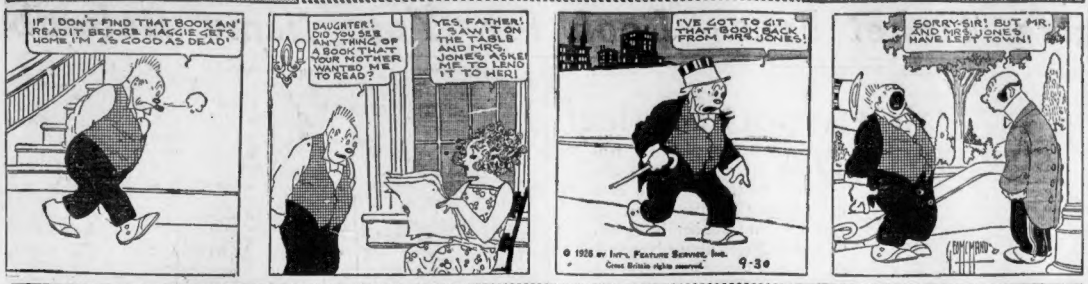

Would she!—

But the restaurant did not fail, it prospered amazingly. For Gertrude and Morris, after they were married, went to New York and brought back with them two stenographers who could appreciate the difference between a beautiful home in the country and a hall bedroom on the ninth floor of a city flat building.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

HAVE fought the fight that the world demands and though now I may taste defeat, I will plead no mercy with suppliant hands, for the struggle itself was sweet. In the fierce turmoil of the grinding day, in the warfare men wage for food, I have found fresh strength for the rugged way and the struggle itself was good. I have learned to glean from each loss some gain, from each error some joy to reap, and, whatever the lost that may yet remain, these things are my own to keep. So I go, untamed by the risks of the road or the griefs that the years assign, for with back unbent I have borne my load and the joy of the struggle is mine.

He that does good for good's sake seeks neither praise nor reward, but is sure of both in the end. —Penn.

Our bravest and best lessons are not learned through success but through misadventure. —A. B. Alcott.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

BY HELEN ROWLAND.

THE only difference between the old days and now is that, then a girl tried to look astonished when a man kissed her—and now she tries NOT to look astonished when he doesn't.

• • •

A "reasonable woman" is one who never asks the reason of anything her husband does, nor stops to reason about anything he tells her.

• • •

Just now, the old-fashioned wife who spent her vacation embroidering towels and learning a new stitch is waking up to discover that her husband spent his decorating the roof-gardens and learning a new dance-step.

• • •

To go right on loving a man or woman who insists on continually telling you the honest truth about yourself, is the condensed milk of human kindness.

Don't try to flatter an old flame by telling her that she "doesn't look a day older"—because, in those days, every woman expects to look at least ten years younger every season.

Simply because he dreams of you all night is no conclusive proof that a man is seriously in love with you—wait until you can make him lie awake and WORRY about you all night.

• • •

No woman will deny the marvelous powers of the psychic medium as long as they can induce a dead husband to carry on a connected conversation with his wife. For that's more than any woman can make a living husband do!

• • •

Nothing so horrifies a bachelor as the thought of being tied for life to somebody who will "understand" him.

STUART'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS

ADVICE TO LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I love a girl whom I have known for two years. About a year ago I asked her to go out with me, and she did. I told her the first time we went out together that I loved her.

She told me there could never be anything between us but friendship. I was heart-broken and did not take her out any more. But about five months ago she asked me to take her out, thinking that she loved me. I renewed our friendship and we went about together for six months.

The last time we were out together I asked her again whether she loved me. She told me she couldn't make up her mind. When she is not with me she thinks she cannot live without me, but when she is with me she doesn't love me.

But she doesn't want to give me up altogether and is willing to go out with me once a week. Shall I give her up? Or shall I try again and wait?

D. R.

TRY again, my friend.

The old adage, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again," often leads to success in love as well as the other affairs of life.

Your friend is evidently fond of you. But she wants to be very sure of her own heart before she promises to be your wife. Continue to be her loyal friend, going about with her occasionally, and give her plenty of time to make up her mind. Good luck to you.

B. U. GET-TOGETHER TO BE STAGED FRIDAY

All students and faculty will be present at the annual get-together at the College of Liberal Arts, Boston University, of the college Y. M. and the Y. W. C. A. Friday night.

The college dramatic club will present a short sketch. Susan Chapman of Somerville will direct the dramatic club's offering and Constance Witherell of Taunton will be in charge of the music. On the committee in charge is headed by Elizabeth D. Morgan of Wollaston.

EXPAND BEACON OIL BUSINESS

In a statement given out today by Albert S. Matthews, vice president Pennzoil Company of New York, and E. N. Wrightington, vice president of Beacon Oil Company of Boston, it is announced that the Beacon Oil Company has purchased the gasoline and kerosene business of Pennzoil in New York State and will stock Pennzoil motor oils in all its Colonial Filling Stations in New England.

Pennzoil is the largest refiner and marketer of 100 per cent. Pennsylvania motor oils in the country.

The volume of Pennzoil's business in motor oils, the statement says, has placed it in a position to achieve its logical ambition in becoming lubricating specialists exclusively. Pennzoil has, therefore, decided to discontinue its deliveries of gasoline and other light products throughout New York and New England and to confine itself in the future entirely to the manufacture and distribution of lubricating oils.

OTHER PURCHASES.

Beacon Oil Company, which has bought the gasoline business of Pennzoil in New York State and in New England has been prominently identified with filling station operations in New England. It operates the largest independent chain of filling stations in New England under the name of Colonial Filling Stations, division of Beacon Oil Company.

The Beacon Oil Company also recently purchased the Consolidated Oil Company of Portland, Me.; Narragansett Filling Stations of Providence, R. I.; Balter Service Stations of Bridgeport, Ct., and is rapidly expanding its business.

TO CARRY PENNZOIL PRODUCTS.

The company will act as exclusive agent of Pennzoil in New England. It will stock Pennzoil motor oils at all its Colonial filling stations and will supply jobbers and dealers throughout New England with the Pennzoil brands.

Beacon Oil Company will continue to carry as in the past its own manufactured brands of Beacon Motor Oil, and by this new connection with Pennzoil, will be able to meet the demand for a 100 per cent. Pennsylvania product with a national reputation.

COLUMBUS DAY EXCURSION TO MONTREAL OVER B. & M.

An excursion to Montreal over Columbus Day, with three days available in that attractive city, is announced by the Boston & Maine Railroad for Saturday, October 9. The usual fare will be reduced to $10 for the round trip, tickets being good in coaches only.

Montreal presents a thousand varied and pleasant sights to the excursionist. T[illegible] for this excursion will be [illegible] either morning or evening [illegible]

Genuine Dragon

But Not St. George's Kind

A REAL DRAGON, THAT LIVES TODAY.

Everybody has read and seen pictures of St. George and the dragon, with St. George getting the best of it, and the dragon getting the worst of it. St. George is England's favorite character in legend. Hence the cry, "St. George and Merrie England."

You know also about the dragons of mythology, the huge snorting dragon from which Perseus delivered Andromeda.

Those old dragons that breathed fire, devoured horses and men, never lived, of course. But this gigantic lizard, growing to be twenty and thirty feet long, in the Dutch East Indies, may be one of the monsters that started the dragon legends.

On the British coat of arms you see the lion and the unicorn, the latter a beast with a single horn growing out of its forehead. There never was a unicorn, but some animals, including the gnu, have horns that grow straight out in front, and that, in PROFILE, look as though they had only one horn.

This big lizard, as this interesting picture from the London Graphic shows you, would not be a pleasant creature to meet alone at twilight. If he can capture and destroy small swine, he would surely make short work of an average man. Thank Heaven we have no such monsters here.

The only creatures that roam our land in the way of dragons are the trust octopuses, the big monopoly dragons, perhaps NOT as harmful, in the long run, as they are supposed to be.

They Respect Us

They Have Reason

M. W. Alexander, president of the National Industrial Conference Board, just back from Europe, says he thinks Europe respects us.

EUROPE OUGHT TO.

Our forty-eight nations organized as the United States, reaching from the Atlantic to the Pacific, get along without fighting, or taxing each other, or setting up tariff barriers between the States.

If Europe organized itself into a united states, giving to each state independence, and arranging for no more European wars, Europe could respect ITSELF, also, and not have to worry about the United States.

However, such a union in Europe is, unfortunately, impossible, no matter how earnestly the enlightened there might wish it.

You cannot cancel in two or three years, or in one CENTURY, of preaching and good-will, racial animosities and rivalries built up through thousands of years.

Railroads Are Learning

They Will Learn More

The railroads are gradually discovering that the motor omnibus exists and is useful. The Baltimore & Ohio takes passengers from New York City to its trains across the Hudson River.

The Pennsylvania Railroad starts its first motor bus line from Chambersburg, Pa., to Piney Mountain Inn, with five fine omnibuses to cover the twelve-mile road.

By and by the roads will learn to do what Henry Ford told them to do many years ago.

They will find a way to use light equipment on their railroads by dividing their transportation units into small units. They will no longer use a car weighing 100,000 pounds to carry 8,000 pounds of passengers, when Henry Ford has shown them how to carry 1,000 pounds of passengers in less than 1,000 pounds of car.

Music in the Foot

Yes, Also in the Brain

The Swiss scientist, Hoepli, says nerve centres that register music and the pleasure it produces are located in the foot. The nerve spot that responds to musical rhythm is close to the big toe. Everybody has moved the big toe in time with music.

All sensation is in the brain. And our ancestors, all the way back to the cave, responded with dancing to the effect that music and rhythm produce upon the brain, and the nerves of music and rhythm may well have become specialized in the feet.

Everything is actually felt in the brain. We call it mind, spirit, conscience, soul, but we do not know what it is.

Overcoats for the Calves

By T. E. Powers

OPINIONS MERELY RIPPLES OF MIND

By DR. FRANK CRANE

OPINIONS are like ripples.

How long they last depends upon the surface on which they appear.

The mind of the individual who holds the opinion is the surface whose character determines its lasting quality.

All are duplicated in the minds of men.

On water, ripples alter with each succeeding breath; in stone they change only with erosion of years.

One type of mind is fluid; another concrete.

The first is plastic but unretentive; the second is retentive but unchanging and indurate.

One changes its opinion too frequently; the other not frequently enough.

In a general way these two characteristics of mind represent two stages of life.

In youth the tendency is to change our opinions too often. In old age the tendency is to change them too seldom.

Youth is a time for ripples on water. It is a time for alternating, changing open-mindedness, for a sort of sparrow-like hopping from one idea to another.

Old age is a time when the ripples of opinion seem marked in stone.

Both attitudes are off balance. One leans too far forward, the other too far back. Between the two extremes is the happy mean.

Of the two attitudes the one that can be most controlled is that of solidity. Little can be done to change the attitude of the mind of youth, and it has time to steady down anyway.

But open-mindedness is a habit that can be cultivated. "A new truth is a truth and an old error is an error," is a good motto for advancing years.

IMPOSSIBLE TO PLEASE EVERYONE; TAKE DEFINITE STAND

YOU try too hard to please and don't please anybody, not even yourself. That is the reason you often find yourself in trouble with your associates.

No matter how hard you try, it is impossible to please everyone.

To be always smoothing things over and trying to make things serene is to find yourself in many embarrassing and harassing circumstances.

Have a mind of your own, and take a stand, and stick to it.

This applies to your own affairs and also to your position among your friends.

As an employe, you must do as authority dictates.

But when it is your own affair don't be a vacillating wobbler.

Don't smother and submerge your own ideas in favor of the other fellow.

That very desire to "not antagonize" is most trying to those whom you want to influence in your favor.

You have a right to opinions and should be free to express them as long as those opinions are not in opposition to the laws of our country or in any way disloyal to them.

Odds and Ends of the Town

By BERT FORD

If you think you are smart don't crow. Let others discover it. Ability speaks for itself. It needs no announcer.

"RELIGIOUS" HANGING

An Episcopal rector announcing preachers who were to fill the pulpit at Summer services in his church by the sea in MAINE, wondered why dignified worshippers were amused when he inadvertently remarked:

"I need not mention their names as you will find them hanging on the outer porch."

FRED'S LATEST

Having rung several door bells without success a woman stopped a letter carrier in ATLANTIC and asked:

"Have you any BOYLE on your beat?"

"No, madam, fallen arcana make one walk that way."

STUDENT SWARM

Alive to the needs and welfare of the 50,000 students flocking to BOSTON for the opening of the school and college year, the OLD SOUTH CHURCH, in the BACK BAY, has planned to do its bit. Special Sunday evening services will be held at which liberal discussion will be encouraged. MISS RUTH GORDON and MISS MILDRED BRADLEY will look after girl students and JAMES D. BALL, CHARLES T. BRIGGS, JAMES C. DAVIS and W. F. BERRY will welcome young men.

"MAHATMA'S" MOTTO

"Little said is easily mended."

That's what MARTIN M. LOMASNEY, the so-called "POLITICAL CZAR," tells reporters in quest of interviews. But when MARTIN says anything you can depend on it.

EMBLEM OF ESTEEM

FRANK A. SEIBERLICH of the BOSTON ELECTION BOARD is sporting a new MASONIC charm, the gift of admirers in WEST ROXBURY, where he hangs his hat. FRANK'S popularity and success are due to a straightforward, agreeable manner that never varies. And he knows his job.

SWINGS A MEAN DRIVER

WILLIAM BANNON, clerk of WALTHAM DISTRICT COURT, is a golf and bowling fan. He captains a local bowling team. Members of WALTHAM COUNTRY CLUB tell me he swings a dangerous driver.

POPULAR UNDERTAKER.

If there was a contest for the most popular undertaker, REPRESENTATIVE PATRICK H. MURRAY of WARD 9, ROXBURY, would cop first prize. Asked why he didn't hold a more active campaign in the recent primary, MURRAY replied: "Let the other fellows call each other names and folks will tire of them and think better of the silent candidate. My reason for running again? Sure I might as well be doing favors for friends in the HOUSE as doing them in the undertaking business."

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

MRS HERNANDEZ graduated this year.

Graduated with a baby on her arm. The baby clutched at the diploma as they ran it in Mrs. Hernandez's soft, brown hand and over the little head the mother's face flamed with a sudden throbbing pride. Down on the front row of seats, Mr. Manuel Jesus Hernandez and the five other little Hernandezes looked upon this glorious scene and their faces flamed too.

It was a great day—da de fiesta—for had not la madre graduated from the American School and was she not now to become a part of that strange, powerful world in which young Pablo, Juan, Teresa, Trinidad and Concepcion would shortly take their places? And because of this would not the whole Hernandez family move up many, many steps in the esteem of the community?

That was what one day in July, 1926, meant to a family of Mexican immigrants. It meant even more to California, the State which conferred that diploma. For it meant that at last America was beginning to cope with the foreign families within her gates.

"But there's nothing new about that," you say. "Three quarters of the children in our schools are from foreign homes."

Not in School.

That is true. But the homes are not in the schools—and there's the hitch. What avails it to instruct Ramon Mendez or Tony Silva in the three Rs of the Anglo-Saxon if, on returning home, Ramon and Tony and Lee are plunged into a 100 per cent. Mexican or Portuguese atmosphere? What chance has a Yankee schoolmarm against a Salvadorean mother, who can't speak a word of English, and whose customs and traditions have no point of contact with the land of her residence? Do you "make Americans" that way? You do not. You make hybrids, who have lost the virtues of the parent stock and acquired no new skill or vision to take its place. From just such hybrids often come the school dullards and the Bad Kids who fill the juvenile courts and ultimately the jails.

But suppose while Tony and Lee are getting the New Idea that the mothers in the homes are getting it, too? Then you've started something. And that's exactly what California has been trying to start for the last ten years. This year saw the first real harvest of that plan.

In 1915 the Commission of Immigration and Housing drafted the Home Teacher Act and Governor Hiram Johnson signed it. "It shall be the duty of the home teacher," ran the act, "to work in the homes of the pupils, instructing children and adults in matters relating to school attendance and preparation therefor; also, in sanitation, in the English language, in household duties, such as purchase, preparation and use of food and clothing, and in the fundamental principles of the American system of government, and the rights and duties of citizenship."

Difficult Struggle.

That ... was ... d. Then came long years of difficult struggle. It was a new idea. The educators had their doubts about it. The taxpayers had their doubts about it. Mrs. Hernandez or Mrs. Silva had the deepest doubts of all. There was no money. There were no teachers. And even if you had the teachers how were ... going to get them in to the homes? But at last the educators and the taxpayers got the idea. And when the foreign-born mothers saw their children growing away from them, into a life to which they had no key—they got the idea, too. So today in California, foreign mothers and fathers are going to school.

They are learning not only the three R's but all the varied customs and conventions of this American civilization. They are learning how to use telephones and clean sinks, how to buy, prepare and cook the countless strange American foods, how to give first aid to their swarming families, how to meet the varying learning demands which ... "over up" them. They are learning how to "keep up with the children" and how to protect themselves against exploitation or fraud.

It's a big job. It goes deeper than taxes or text books. It goes into the depths of human fear and love, pride and prejudice. In time it is going to break down some of the current mutual suspicion between the foreign-born and the more assimilated American.

Italy in the Electric Age

By Garrett P. Serviss,

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

THE Romans were the great engineers of old; they belted the known world with roads that were the wonder of succeeding centuries, and built bridges and aqueducts and domes and vaults that travelers go to look at today.

The Romans were great because they were at the head of the practical science of their time. The memory of this must come back to anyone visiting Italy at present. That land recalls its past; it is inhabited by descendants as well as by successors of the Romans who followed Scipio and Caesar.

Once more Italy has seized the handle of practical science and is forging to the front. She has set her Alps and Apennines to work, turning their tumbling waterfalls into streams of energy which have not only transformed the crowded plains of Piedmont and Lombardy into the image of a world of workshops, but are flashing down the historic peninsula—become a long spine of electric fire at whose thrilling touch Rome rises from the grave of time.

More than two thousand hydro-electric stations are energized by the Alps and the Apennines, lighting cities and villages, running trains, actuating machinery of every kind.

What wise words would not old Seneca have uttered if he could have beheld that spectacle! What delightful letters could not a new Pliny write from his shady villa under the brows of the laboring Alps, describing this new marvel of the Roman genius of work!

WORK! That was always the secret of Roman success. Read now under the lash of Caesar's glance the legionaires toiled with the plus and the spade as well as with the spear and the sword, to win a world empire and undying fame.

But the modern Italians are among the foremost in applying the new secret which science has opened up, that nature can be compelled to share in man's work, and in doing so vastly extend the scope of that work.

The substitution of water power for coal is a brightening process. It is a moral uplift. It makes the world look more cheerful, more sunny. When man no longer has to dig deep in the underground dejoness for fuel, but can take it universally from the realm of the atmosphere, a shout of joy and relief should ring round the earth.

And let Italy be an admired example of the awakening spirit of the new method of power production. Coal, however abundant, could never have brought about the transformation of industry and of life that now amazes and delights the traveler in that beautiful land.
